If All Lights Went Out One Dull Little Boy So He Goes to Miami Science Goes On

By Arthur Brisbane

ACTING GOV. WOLBER of New Jersey, Edison's state, supports enthusiastically the suggestion made by W. R.' Hearst, Jr., to President Hoover that on the night following Edison's funeral all electric lights be extinguished for one minute to remind the country of its debt to Edison.

The dullest would be impressed, and made to realize the value of Edison's work, if suddenly, instantaneously, electric lights in every city could be changed to utter darkness. Millions, by the way, would probably get in that moment a view of the sky, and the stars, at night, for the first time in a long while.

Edison, a little boy of 10, was already working at new ideas, "trying to invent things." His teachers complained that he was "absent minded," did not pay attention, called him "dull."

Many other little boys suffer from a so-called "absent mindedness" which in reality is proof of a mind trying to work on its own problems, in spite of constant interruption and exactions.

Fathers and mothers and TEACHERS ESPECIALLY should remember it.

Mr. Alphonse Capone, bootleg-prohibition "big shot," is convicted and Judge Wilkerson will probably sentence him to Leavenworth penitentiary for several years. But sentencing him does not mean SENDING him.

Legal technicalities and delays will postpone the "sending" for several years.

Meanwhile, Mr. Capone, whose specialty is not cowardice, orders several suits of clothing, "tropical weight," for his approaching journey to Miami's sunshine.

How different from the game of racketeering. You read about the "tropical weight" suits, and then about a certain bootlegger and racketeer, who had refused to take the hint of a bootleg organization and retire from the beer trade.

He was sentenced, not to Leavenworth, but to death.

Two men called on him, one grasped his hand firmly, saying, "Hello Max," while the other pressed a gun against Max's head and fired five bullets.

After he dropped, to make sure, they fired more bullets, then left.

Racketeering does not recognize any appeal. The law may have to come to that.

Men come and go, stocks rise and fall, governments dwindle and pass, SCIENCE GOES ON.

Bell Telephone scientific laboratories have developed a new air gauge to interest you. You know that the atmosphere presses on us, living at the bottom of the air, as the water presses on fish living at the bottom of the ocean. No living man could carry half the weight that his body carries, without knowing it in atmospheric pressure.

Messrs. Jaycox and Weinhart, engineers of Bell Telephone laboratories, have invented an air gauge that will measure air pressure to within ONE-TRILLIONTH. That divides the actual pressure by 1,000,000,000,000. The pressure on your body would be reduced to one-trillionth of normal, if you could go to the top of our atmosphere, and you would instantly explode. That is one ordeal to be met on our first journey to the moon, or Mars.

The League of Nations, having dragged in Uncle Sam to share with it the hostility of Japan, practically forced the Japanese out of Manchuria. Japan wants to know why years of treaty violations by China are overlooked, and only Japan criticized.

What interests the United States is THIS:

Suppose the League of Nations gave us that sort of order some day. Suppose it had ordered us to get out of Cuba when we sent there after the Maine was sunk. Suppose it had ordered our marines to get out of Hawaii. Should we feel inclined to obey?

Why should we join the League in giving orders to the Japanese Empire, when we know that we should not be willing to have the League give orders to us? We should defy such orders, as Japan probably will defy the League.

It is the intention of Japan to attend to its own affairs, thus setting Uncle Sam a good example. This is shown by news that the Japanese are digging trenches and building barracks in Manchuria, settling down for the winter, regardless of League of Nations "ukases."

TRUNK DEATHS CONFESSION REVEALED

3 KILLED IN LOWELL AUTO PLUNGE

YOUTH SAYS SISTER SLEW TWO GIRLS

Wife of Los Angeles Doctor Is Hunted in Arizona "Trunk Murder" Mystery

Los Angeles, Oct. 20—Breaking down under police grilling, B. J. McKinnell, 22, a University of Southern California student, today confessed, police said, that his sister, Mrs. Ruth Judd, 27, wife of a Los Angeles physician, had admitted killing Agnes Leroi and Hedwig Samuelson, two women friends, and shipping their mangled bodies in trunks from Phoenix, Ariz., to Los Angeles.

"My little sister said she was 'perfectly justified,'" McKinnell sobbed, in his alleged confession.

Questioned further by police, young McKinnell said:

"I asked Sis what was in the trunks and she said, 'Bodies.' She refused to give me details, saying I had better keep out of it. I told her 'that's a good idea.' I told her she's best get out and get out quick."

"I gave her $5 and she got out of my car. I haven't seen her since—and I hope she gets away!"

McKinnell was unable to explain "why" his sister committed the double murder, and that "why" was the question officers of Southern California and Arizona today sought to answer.

TRIED TO GET TRUNKS

The slain women were roommates at a hospital clinic in Phoenix. Mrs. Judd was employed as a secretary at the clinic. She has been missing from Phoenix since Saturday.

LEADERS JOIN WAR TO SAVE NAVY YARD

Governor, Mayor, Business Men and Industrial Heads Organize for Vast Protest

The drive to save Boston navy yard from being closed was begun today at a luncheon in Boston Chamber of Commerce attended by civic and industrial leaders.

Among those who voiced their protest at the proposed closing of the yard were Gov. Ely, Mayor Curley, President Henry L. Harriman of the Chamber, ex-Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, Cong. John J. Douglass, Cong. Frederick Dallinger and Richard S. Teeling.

All were outspoken against the abandonment of the historic yard and urged every person in New England to do his utmost to prevent it.

One of the most vigorous protests was uttered by President Harriman, who presided.

LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY

"To close Boston Navy Yard," he said, "may likely result in the loss of much life and property which might otherwise be preserved.

"Naval strategists have stated that Boston is likely to be one of the principal points chosen for enemy assault in case of war and the sense of security of millions of citizens depends largely upon an efficient naval base at Boston.

"Part of such a naval base is an efficient navy yard. The people of New England will look with the greatest apprehension upon any plan which contem-

2 WOMEN, MAN, LOSE LIVES IN CANAL

Husband of One Victim Fails in Heroic Attempt to Rescue Those Pinned in Car

Lowell, Oct. 20—Two women and a man plunged to death in the Dutton st. canal here early today when the auto in which they were riding crashed through a fence in the dead-end of French st.

One man, husband of one of the women, extricated himself from the submerged auto by kicking a hole in the roof. His efforts to save the other three, trapped in the submerged car, were futile although he stuck to his task and fought attempts to take him from the water. Members of the fire department finally recovered the bodies.

The dead, all residents of Old Manchester rd., Derry, N. H., are:

Bailou, Mrs. Josephine, 28.

Coombs, Mrs. Beatrice F., 33.

Bailou, John, 34.

RESCUE BALKED

George D. Coombs, 33, husband of Mrs. Coombs, was the only one to escape. He told police he and his wife were riding in the rear seat of his auto, which was being operated by Bailou, Mrs. Bailou was seated beside her husband.

When the car plunged into the canal, Coombs butted his head through the roof and extricated himself. He grasped his wife's hand and was hauling he rout when the car lurched and settled, causing him to lose his grip.

George Gregoire of 6 Dutton st., hearing the crash, ran from his home and saw Coombs struggling in the water. He procured a life-saving ladder and thrust it down to Coombs, but the latter disregarded it and continued his efforts to save the others.

RETURNING FROM HOSPITAL

He tried repeatedly but was unable to reach any of the three. Meantime police and firemen reached the scene and ladders and grappling hooks were brought into play. After about two hours' work

PASTOR GIVES UP TO COURT

The Rev. Lorenzo D. Case, pastor of the First Universalist Church at Oldstown, Me., and former pastor of the First Universalist Church in Lowell, surrendered himself in Middlesex Superior Court today to answer an indictment charging non-support, desertion and abandonment.

Arraigned on the charges, the Rev. Case pleaded not guilty and was allowed to go on his own recognizance to await trial.

He was indicted on October 6 by the Grand Jury, following complaint by his divorced wife, Mrs. Ruth H. Case of Lowell, that the minister had failed to obey a court order of last April to pay her $25 a week for support of herself and 16 year-old son, Dow L. Case, a Lowell high school student.

Attempts by Dist.-Atty. Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex County to have county officials in Maine place the Rev. Case under arrest failed when the Maine officials would not co-operate.

A capias was then issued for the minister's arrest and extradition papers were being drawn up when the Rev. Case notified Dist.-Atty. Bishop that he would appear voluntarily.

GIRL IS HURT IN DOCK STRIKE

A girl was injured in the dock strike on Chelsea waterfront today by a barrage of stones.

With two other girls she was walking in Warren ave., at Water st., when the stones were hurled at the sedan of Ambrose Donahue, a boss strikebreaker, bounced off the roof and struck them.

Agnes Brennan, 20, of Conant st., Roxbury, was treated for cuts and bruises at Haymarket Relief Station.

Isaac Hodgden, 52, of Willow ave., Somerville, bodyguard for Donahue, was treated for cuts on the face. Donahue and Louis A. J. Jones, driver, escaped injury.

The outbreak occurred soon after the arrival from New York of Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Union, in a new move for peace.

A legal outbreak came in East Boston when Capt. Archibald Campbell formally entered police complaint against trucks that carry strikebreakers to the piers.

Before Judge Joseph H. Barnes, Capt. Campbell charged the truck owners and drivers were not complying with the hackney laws. He said he asked the complaints at the urge of counsel for strikers.

Judge Barnes reserved decision.

Burgess G. Hodges Found Dead in Bed

Burgess G. Hodges, 49, president of Hodges, Inc., necktie manufacturers of Boston and New York, was found dead in bed today at his home, 19 St. Lukes rd., Allston, by Mrs. Jessie Logan, a neighbor.

Mrs. Logan summoned Dr. Edward Kaplan of Commonwealth ave., who said death was due to embolism.

Mr. Hodges was the son of the late Edmund S. Hodges, president of the Roxbury Shoe-Thread Co., and is survived by a married sister, Mrs. Beatrice H. Lamont of Lexington.

BLUENOSE WINS RACE AND TITLE

By TOM HORGAN

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 20 (AP)—The Bluenose of Lunenburg, N. S., today won he International Fishermen's Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the North Atlantic fishing fleet, by defeating the Gloucester challenger, Gertrude L. Thebaud.

The Canadian defender, which for ten years has worn the crown as queen of the fishing fleet, led the American challenger across the line by a mile at the end of their 36-mile race. It was her second victory in two days.

Bluenose finished at 2:36:12 (Atlantic time). Her elapsed time for the course was 5:06:12.

Thebaud fought a valient but hopeless battle, and the contest proved conclusively that the fishing schooner that can beat Bluenose is yet to be launched.

The start today went to the Thebaud, Capt. John Matheson, substituting for Capt. Ben Pine, who was snatched from Thebaud's wheel by illness, carried his charge down half the open ocean course on even terms with the defender.

Then Capt. Angus Walters hauled his ship into the lead and brought her home a winner.

South Berwick Mill Goes to New Yorker

South Berwick, Me., Oct. 20 (AP)—The Wechawanick mill here has been acquired by the Fred A. Lawrence Co., of New York, textile corporation. The price was not made public.

The purchase included all buildings and land of the mill corporation, comprising several brick structures and a wooden factory, except a number of tenement houses. Howard Wood of Worcester, appointed resident manager of the new concern, indicated the factory would turn out woolen products.

17 Overcome by Fumes in North End Plant

London, Oct. 20 (INS)—King George will return to Buckingham Palace from Sandringham, Monday to be in London during the general elections on Oct. 27.

Unless the temper of the people undergoes a change, the monarch will find the capital torn by political dissension and submerged in a wave of rowdyism that has swept over the entire country.

STOCK MARKET PUSHES UP

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Securities markets pushed forward confidently again today, overcoming the hesitancy of the past two sessions.

The bond market was the strongest in several days. The U. S. government issues were in demand, and Japanese issues, which broke sharply yesterday, quickly recovered.

In shares, advances of $2 to $8 were numerous, and trading was in substantial volume. For a time, the ticker was unable to keep up with transactions.

Good buying was said in brokerage circles to be coming from both domestic and foreign sources, the odd lot transactions were in such volume as to indicate renewed interest on the part of small investors.

Banking circles were impressed with the signs of renewed confidence in America abroad, particularly as indicated by fresh purchases of American bankers acceptances by the Bank of France.

More of That Good Weather Coming

Today's clear weather will continue through tomorrow, the weather man predicted today. The entire country was the same, according to the map, with the exception of slight disturbances in the extreme northwest, the Rocky Mountains and a portion of the southwest.

The official forecast was: Fair tonight and Wednesday; not much change in temperature; moderate westerly winds.

EDISON TO BE BURIED WITH METHODIST SERVICE

FUNERAL HOUR SET FOR 2:30 TOMORROW

Thousands View Body Lying in State in the Famous Laboratory

By CHARLES J. McGUIRK,
International News Service Correspondent.

West Orange, N. J., Oct. 20.—Thomas A. Edison, who was so conservative in his religious belief that he would not go beyond admitting that there is a supreme intelligence, will be buried with Methodist Episcopal services.

The inventor's body still lay in state today in the laboratory where he achieved world fame and where thousands passed in line for a last view, as thousands of others had yesterday and last night.

It is expected President Hoover will attend the services. Word was received from Washington that he was arranging affairs there with that in view.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 tomorrow from Glenmont, the inventor's home on top of the hill in Llewelyn Park. Interment will be in Rosedale Cemetery, a beautiful graveyard on the border line between Orange and West Orange.

The Rev. Stephen J. Herben, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Maplewood, a little town two miles to the south of here, will conduct the services.

WIDELY CHURCH LEADER.

Christian burial will be accorded this man, who was one of the greatest thinkers of all time, because of the influence of Mrs. Edison, his widow, for 25 years president of the Ladies' Guild of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Orange, and a moving spirit in the gathering of the funds with which the present edifice was built.

It was through Mrs. Edison that the Rev. Arthur H. Brown, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Orange, started yesterday morning a series of three short prayers a day, at 8 in the morning, at noon and at sundown, which will be continued through today. The next service will be those with which the dead wizard is consigned to the dust.

SUNSET PRAYERS

In his prayer at sundown last night, the Rev. Brown quoted from the book of Ecclesiastes in which Solomon painted the glory of the heavens:

"This man," continued the clergyman, looking down at the still form of Edison in his bronze casket," was also touched with the spirit of Jehovah.

"He stands out from among us for his love of truth, for his patient persistence, for his humility before the great facts of life, for his eagerness to be of benefit to the rest of mankind. In him were all the elements that go to make the man of God."

While he spoke, a small group of women stood reverently beside the casket. They were members of the Women's Guild of Mrs. Edison's church. You could feel their sympathy go out to her over the body of her dead husband.

10,000 PASS BIER.

Outside the crowd wound slowly in and from the building. Ten thousand passed the bier. All creeds, all colors, all ages, the bent and the infirm, the young and eager, moving slowly past for one last look at him. Edison, the inventor, the man who made the phonograph and the moving picture, and the incandescent lamp, and arranged things so that radio was made possible.

The radio that brings a man's weak voice hurtling and roaring into a room a thousand miles away. One last look at Edison, one last look at the man whose like will not be seen again for a long, long time. Maybe a thousand years.

Senator Guglielmo Marconi in a cable from Rome said:

"As a devoted friend and most genuine admirer of your late husband, whose life and achievements have greatly inspired me throughout my life, I beg to express to you my own and my wife's heartfelt sympathy in your great loss which is shared by the whole civilized world."

U. S. War Vets in Tribute at Bier of Edison

West Orange, N. J., Oct. 20 (AP)—To their comrade, Thomas A. Edison, who turned his inventive genius to national defense in the World War, the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign wars paid tribute today.

In a solemn service, 30 representatives of both organizations filed through the public lighted library where the dead inventor lay in state, stood at attention, and saluted as two of their number draped the casket with an American flag.

Mrs. Edison was visibly impressed by the ceremony. At her side were her son, Theodor, Mrs. Mulbert Kellogg Hitchcock, her sister, and John V. Miller, her brother.

HOOVER FACING SENATE ROW OVER PACT

Administration Interpretation of Manchurian Situation Breeds New Quarrel

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service)

Washington, Oct. 20—Invoking the Kellogg pact as an excuse for American participation in the Manchurian deliberations of the League council in Geneva threatened today to provoke a new quarrel between the administration and its senior partner in treaty-making—the United States Senate.

Returning senators who have looked up the conditions under which the Senate advised and consented to the ratification of the Kellogg pact less than three years ago find a startling conflict between the Coolidge and Hoover interpretations of this treaty.

The Hoover administration sits with the league council upon the apparent theory that the United States is under obligations to enforce this treaty to prevent war in the Far East.

Speaking for President Hoover, Secretary Stimson has offered this alleged obligation as the administration's alibi for accepting the invitation of the League of Nations to a seat on its council.

The Coolidge administration contended that this treaty involved no obligation on the part of the United States to attempt its enforcement against any nation or group of nations.

Speaking for President Coolidge, Secretary Kellogg then assured the American people that this treaty would no more associate the United States with foreign political entanglements than would an ordinary commercial or arbitration treaty.

This was the distinct understanding of the Committee on Foreign Relations, which reported the treaty to the Senate.

EDISON ALWAYS THOUGHT WELL OF BOSTON

Often Recalled His Old Associates Here and Wanted to Hear About Them

There was always a warm spot in the heart of Thomas A. Edison for Boston and the old associates with whom he worked as a telegrapher in this city in 1868.

Years after his departure from Boston and when he was well on the road to world-wide fame, he inquired about the young men who worked side by side with him in the old Western Union office at 109 State st.

Charles F. Ames, New England superintendent of Western Union offices, had several meetings with the great inventor and each time was called upon to answer Edison's eager inquiries about his old friends.

Long years after many of them had passed away Edison recalled little incidents that had happened in the days when as a youth he struggled for recognition of his vote-recording machine—his first practical invention—which was completed in Boston.

"I first met Mr. Edison at a telegraphers' dinner in New York in 1905," said Mr. Ames. "I had been in Boston only three years then and, of course, knew comparatively few of the old operators.

"But I was subjected to searching inquiry by him and I think he drew from me every last detail of his old associates whom I happened to know. Many of them had passed on even then, but he pressed me for information of those who were still living.

"I was introduced to him as 'Mr. Ames from Boston.' He seized me by the hand and said, 'Ah! From Boston? Come right over here, Mr. Ames.'"

"He led me to a corner and began a barrage of questioning about his old friends and haunts in Boston. He showed deep concern when I mentioned the death of several of his old fellow-workers and seemed genuinely pleased at the success others had attained.

AMUSING INCIDENTS

"He mentioned many little amusing incidents and chuckled as he recalled them. He liked to refer to the days when he occupied little hall bedrooms on Beacon Hill and old landmarks that have long since disappeared.

"But mostly his thoughts were of his old friends in the city it was a social side of the man that was somewhat surprising when it came to the surface. Frequently he would say, 'Time flies so—it is too bad to lose touch with our old acquaintances.'"

TWO KILLED IN BANK ROBBERY

Menomonie, Wis., Oct. 20 (AP)—An assistant cashier and a robber were killed as four machine gun raiders looted the Kraft State Bank today.

James Kraft, 19 son of W. F. Kraft, president of the bank, was kidnaped and slain by the bandits, while W. H. Kraft, 22, another son, was wounded, not seriously, because he failed to point out where more money was.

The robber was killed by shots fired at the city in which the quartet sped out of town after spraying the street near the bank with machine gun bullets.

Bank officials said a hurried check indicated the robbers took about $10,000.

They will not tolerate the theory that there is no God, and all they have to hope for is the little that a dictator can give them here on earth. That teaching may suit the dictator who has everything, not the peasant with just enough to keep him alive.

At Tlapacoyan, in Mexico, statues were taken from the village church and burned, the church was sacked, the desecration and contemptuous ignoring of religious feelings were complete.

But there was a sequel. The people attacked the municipal authorities, held responsible, set fire to the municipal palace, killed the mayor of the town, Manuel Lopez, killed nine others and wounded many.

There are two sides to a religious quarrel, both disagreeable.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has invented a way to encourage employment, and do something worthwhile at the same time, that may be interesting to others with money.

At Poncantico Hills, where he and his father lived, Mr. Rockefeller persuaded the citizens to build a new $160,000 public school, and he pays half.

Mill Workers Beaten, 5 Arrests in Lawrence Strike

ESCAPED AS TWO CHUMS WERE SHOT DEAD

Commissioner Hultman Visits Crickard and Tells Him He Did a Good Job

Thomas Brennick, 22, of Bunker Hill st., Charlestown, today confessed, according to police, he was the driver of the stolen auto in which two young men were shot to death by Patrolman Edward Crickard Sunday night.

Brennick made his confession to Capt. Martin King and Lieut. James Hinchey of the Milk st. station, police said, giving details as to when and where the car was stolen and of the ride which ended in death.

The alleged confession, made by the only occupant of the car to escape the policeman's bullets, came shortly after Crickard, on a cot in Haymarket Relief Hospital, was commended by Commissioner Hultman.

TWO GIRLS VANISH

At the same time police were hunting two girls, one named Helen Murphy of Dorchester, and seeking warrants against two youths in connection with the wild auto ride along Tremont st., with Crickard's hand jammed in the car door.

According to the police, Brennick said the car was stolen in Chelsea, and its plates thrown over Chelsea bridge into Mystic river.

They were replaced by other plates stolen from a car in Charlestown, police quoted him as saying.

They said Brennick told them the two girls who were in the car up to the time it was stopped by Officer Crickard had been picked up in Chelsea and were strangers to him.

Brennick was surrendered to police by his father.

"GOOD WORK," SAYS CHIEF.

The commendation came as police were hunting two girls, one named Helen Murphy of Dorchester, and were seeking warrants against two youths in connection with the wild auto ride along Tremont st. with Officer Crickard's hand jammed in a door.

Commissioner Hultman, who thus far had refused to comment on the case, made his position plain when he and Police Supt. Crowley called at the hospital for a 10-minute visit. Both shook Officer Crickard's uninjured hand and Hultman said:

"You used your head and you got your men. You did a very good job."

Crickard thanked his chief and added:

"I had to do it, Commissioner,' but sometimes when I think of it, I get a little bit sick."

"Forget it," advised the commissioner. "It must have been an awful shock, but you did a splendid job. You did your duty."

The two girls sought by police are believed to be the two who were in the stolen car when it arrived in Chelsea, and who jumped out and hurried away as Crickard approached to question them three male companions.

If Helen Murphy, who is 18, can be located police believe she will clear up many details of the case.

Warrants against Brennick and Edward Bryson, 23, of Medford st., Charlestown, were sought today in municipal court by police.

GIVES HIMSELF UP

Bryson is an alleged accessory after the fact, inasmuch as he is declared to have withheld valuable information from police until confronted with the facts, obtained from other sources.

A third Charlestown youth, Joseph Cooney, 22, also of 26 Medford st., is in custody. Police allege that Bryson revealed Brennick's story to Cooney before relating it to Lieut. Hickey of the Brennick is alleged to have attempted to knock Patrolman Crickard, whose left hand was caught in the door jamb, from the running board of the car. The driver ran down School st. and escaped after the crash.

2 GIRLS AMONG VICTIMS OF OUTBREAKS

Policeman and Guards Are Attacked; Four Prisoners Face Deportation

Lawrence, Oct. 20—Violence marked the textile strike a second time today when a 19-year-old girl, daughter of a mill boss and herself an office employe of the Wood Mill, was beaten.

Following early morning outbreaks when four men were arrested, the girl, whose name was withheld, was attacked in an indigene in Osgood st. while returning to work after lunch, knocked down and severely bruised.

Police with drawn clubs drove off the girls attackers and after a chase arrested Philip Concemi of 36 Portland st., who was charged with assault and battery.

ATTACKS RENEWED

The action was taken as a result of reports of further violence against those attacked earlier today.

Men and women workers were set upon and beaten, then rescued by police details augmented as a result of last night's disturbances, when stones with threatening notes attached were hurled through windows of homes, as on Sunday night.

13,000 ON PICKET LINE.

Anthony Romano, 40, of 277 Elm st., was charged with intimidation. A charge of assault and battery on Herbert W. Ford, night watchman at the Pacific Mills, was placed against Antonio Centrelli, 40, of 24 Castellion pl. Peter Poyseli, 44, of 2 Bennington st., was held for assault and battery and intimidation in Florence Segnes, 18, of Methuen, employed in the Pemberton Mill.

All were found guilty in District Court, and a recommendation that they be deported was made by Judge Frederick Chandler on learning the defendants were aliens. Bonds were held in $1,000 each for a hearing Oct. 24, and the Federal authorities were notified.

According to the probation officers, the defendants came to this country between 1912 and 1919 but failed to become citizens.

With an estimated 13,000 on the picket line, police were prepared for emergencies when the mills threw open their doors.

The first outbreak was in front of the Wood mill, where police say Concilio Lella struck a blow at against a worker trying to enter the building.

Officers across the street at the Pacific mill drew their guns and dispersed the crowd which had gathered on Garrison Square.

It was estimated that about 200 workers entered the mills here, with another hundred reporting back at the Merrimack Woolen Mill in Dracut.

DOOLITTLE ON 3 NATIONS HOP

Washington Oct. 20—Maj. James H. Doolittle, who took off at 4:40 a. m. Eastern standard time, today on a 2500-mile dawn-to-dusk flight to Mexico City, reached here at 7 a. m.

Fog blanketed Bolling Field so thickly that after circling it several times the flier landed at Washington Hoover Airport. Doolittle was back in the air again at 7:28.

Doolittle landed at Birmingham, Ala., at 9:29 a. m., C. S. T., and took off again seven minutes later. He covered approximately 640 miles from Washington to Birmingham in two hours, 59 minutes.

At Birmingham after 100 gallons of fuel had been taken on, Doolittle took off for Corpus Christi, Tex. He did not leave his plane during the seven-minute stop. Corpus Christi is about 630 miles from Birmingham.

Doolittle passed north of Galveston at 12:13 p. m. (E. S. T.).

James L. Karrick Dead

Pittsfield, Oct. 20 (AP)—James Karrick, 60, prominent in real estate and banking circles in Washington, D. C., died today. He was operated on Saturday for appendicitis.

LAVAL DRAFTS 'NEUTRAL' PACT

S. S. Ile de France, Oct. 20 (AP)—Premier Pierre Laval of France, on his way to Washington to talk with President Hoover, made it clear today that he is willing to meet the President half way on any proposals he may make, so long as they are acceptable to the French Parliament.

And, if he can get a promise of American co-operation which would justify from the French standpoint cutting down the outlay on armaments his latitude in the negotiations at Washington will be increased.

In this connection, it is understood, he is ready to propose an agreement that in case of war involving either country, neither would permit its resources to be used against the other.

A "consultative pact" has been suggested as a description for such an agreement, but the French idea is that it would be of a very definite character and possibly would include other powers.

Then, in case France, the United States, or any other signatory should be attacked, no neutral power included in he agreement would aid the aggressor by furnishing him with munitions or other supplies.

NEW DIET AIDS MRS. WOOD

New York, Oct. 20—A diet of tomatoes and chicken instead of evaporated milk and rancid bacon has so improved the health of Mrs. Ida E. Wood, 93, who had $1,000,000 in cash and jewels in her hotel bedroom until they were taken from her for safe keeping, that she is slowly regaining her vigor.

Half blind, her health imperiled by indigent nourishment, Mrs. Wood was in a dangerously run-down condition when her nephew Otis F. Wood, was appointed her legal guardian two weeks ago.

MOB MENACES SLAYER OF 4

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP)—For the second time in a week, Yael Lee, alias Orphan Jones, confessed negro slayer of an Eastern Shore farm family of four, was hustled to the Baltimore City jail for protection against threatened mob violence.

Lee was brought here last Wednesday a short time after he confessed killing Mr. and Mrs. Green Davis and their two daughters, but was taken back to Snow Hill yesterday. He was indicted for the four murders and then entered pleas of not guilty.

Half of America Now Outside Fold of All Churches

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 20 (INS)—More than one-half the population of the United States is not connected with any institution of organized religion, the Rev. Dr. John McDowell of New York, secretary of the Board of National Missions, Presbyterian Church in the United States, said today.

Addressing the Annual meeting of the synod of New Jersey of the church Dr. McDowell said there are still 10,000 rural communities in this country without a church of any kind. There are 9,000 communities without a resident pastor and 12,000,000 children under 12 who are receiving no religious education, he added.

JURY RESUMES COLLINGS CASE

Everett, Oct. 20 (INS)—A grand jury investigation into the murder of Benjamin P. Collings, who was tossed up by two pirates and thrown from his yacht into the waters of Long Island Sound, was resumed here today.

William H. Reilly, counsel for Mrs. Collings, said that it was unlikely the widow would testify although the has been requested to come here.

Dr. Vincent Macaniffe of Huntington, the physician who assisted Dr. Otto H. Schultz at the autopsy on the body of Collings, was the first to enter the Suffolk County grand jury room. Fifteen witnesses have been summoned.

CLUB DEFENDED IN 'GRAFT' CASE

Lawrence, Oct. 20—The demise of the "S & W Club," a club of city workers in the street and water departments, was described today in superior court at the trial for alleged graft of Alderman John W. McCarthy, John F. Sullivan, former carpenter, and Joseph M. Rinehart, clerk of the street department.

The club, according to government charges, was one of the means employed for the collection of money from those for whom jobs were procured.

Martin J. Kilourie, 27, of Hampshire st., told of the club breakup on McCarthy's orders after he admitted he rose from laborer to rodman in four months. He went to work in 1928, the day McCarthy was elected, he said.

2nd of Drug Farms Wanted for Hospital

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—A demand that the second of two federal narcotic farms be made a hospital for voluntary cases instead of a penitentiary for addicts, was voiced today by Miss Sara Graham-Mulhall, for 21 years anti-narcotic campaigner.

She announced her intention of working for enactment of such a law at life next session of Congress.

Slayer of Three Polite to the Last

Chester, Ill., Oct. 20 (AP)—Sheriff James Johnson, 75, who said, "I thank you" when sentenced to death for the murder of Mrs. Clarie Howell, with whom he lived, and her two small sons, was executed today.

"So long, boys," he said, as he was taken into the death chamber. "So long, boys," he repeated before the current was turned on.

Johnson said he killed Mrs. Rowers and her two children "because she begged me to."

STAMP RECORD FOR YORKTOWN

Wethersfield, Ct., Oct. 20 (AP)—Yorktown sesqui-centennial stamps sent out from the local postoffice set a record in first day sales of a commemorative issue.

The stamps went on general sale throughout the country today. Yesterday, however, only the postoffices at Yorktown, scene of the decisive battle, and in this town, scene of the conference between Washington and Rochambeau, issued them.

Sales here totalled about $275,000. The previous record was held by Danville, N. Y., on the Red Cross stamp some months ago, where 170,000 were issued the first day.

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—A half dozen postmasters in various parts of the country placed the special Yorktown stamps on sale ten days before they were supposed to be available to the collecting and mailing public.

The postoffice department has warned the offenders that if it happens again they will be asked to look for other jobs.

U. S. Lines Sale Offer Expected in Week

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—Chairman O'Connor of the Shipping Board expects to receive within a week an offer for the purchase of the United States Lines by a combine of east and west coast shipping interests, it was announced today.

He conferred in New York yesterday with representatives of the Chapman-Dollar-Dawson interests and the Roosevelt International Mercantile Marine Co., and he was assured that details soon would be arranged.

STUDENT SAYS SISTER KILLED TWO GIRLS

With the discovery of the bodies and the alleged confession of Miss Judd's brother an intensive search for Mrs. Judd was of course started by the police.

A warrant charging Mrs. Judd, John Doe and Jane Doe with first degree murder in the slaying of Miss Samuelson, and a second warrant charging Mrs. Judd with the slaying of Miss Lerol were issued as the search began.

A woman answering Mrs. Judd's description was seen on a southbound Arizona train passing here to be the second fruitless search.

The hysterical woman, upon arrival in the police station, insisted on having her baggage searched before she would tell them who she was or what business had brought her to Phoenix earlier in the evening.

Young McDonnell told the W. C. Judd, the second husband, were quickly located and questioned, while other officers searched for Mrs. Judd herself. The latter is believed to have left the city by train after the murders of the two girls whose bodies were found.

HUSBAND QUIZZED

Police said McDonnell at first admitted seeing Ruth Judd enter the automobile in addition to seeing the trunks and rope in her room, because he feared his sister's testimony against him would identify him in the case.

"If my wife did this I believe she was mentally deranged," he said.

Interest in the mystery stalks to the case was increased when a Phoenix detective said a grocery boy there had identified a picture of the girl found in one of a pair he saw in the apartment of the murder victims last Friday.

The search for police has not been in Arizona for several weeks, with Young McDonnell he was held after the discovery.

Letters and photographs found in the trunks, first aroused police in the death of Mrs. Judd and her husband, and concern the identity of the victims, each of whom had been shot.

After discovery of the bodies, one of which was dismembered, police found a suitcase in a restroom containing a portion of one of the torsos.

In Mrs. Judd's apartment at Phoenix police later found a letter to her signed W. C. J., her husband's initials, it was said.

"I don't want to write a letter to lie around for Sammy (Miss Samuelson's nickname) and Miss Lerol to read.

"I hope you will let me know as soon as you can what the chances are of your clinic closing or your doctors quitting. I hate to think of you being alone.

"I had supposed that you thought so much of those two girls that you would be perfectly happy with them, but if you are not it puts a different face on matters.

"I am not at all surprised at what you tell me. I do not care to write you freely because you are careless with letters."

The youngest victim, Miss Samuelson, had been out three times in the brown mansion and temple. The other was a white woman in the temple only.

Arthur V. Anderson, district baggage agent for the Southern Pacific, who discovered the trunks, said that when the man and woman came to get them they requested that the trunks be opened and examined. He said the woman claimed she did not have the keys in her possession, but would go after them.

PHOTOS IN TRUNKS

The man and woman then went away. Anderson said, after waiting four hours for them to return, he called the police.

In the larger trunk was a photograph labelled as having been taken on Otis N. Harmon, of Portland, Ore., and bearing the penciled notation, "Inga, Angle, Christmas, 1922, 20 years old."

There were several other photographs, an evening gown with bells, a long broad knife, heel but not bloodstained, and a woman's purse containing 60 cartridges and exploded shells.

Clothing had been packed around the bodies.

The tag on the small trunk bore a note saying:

"Don't delay; will see me personally."

The letters were addressed to "Hedvig Samuelson, 329 Portland st., Phoenix, Ariz. One of the trunks also contained a photograph of an attractive brunette.

On the back of the photograph was pencilled "Hedvig Samuelson, Lunda, N. D." A diploma bearing the same name and issued July 24, 1925, from the North Dakota State Normal School also was found.

Bodies Traced From Missing Woman's Home

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 20—Miss Agnes Lerol, 25, a nurse at Grunow Memorial Clinic here, and Miss Hedwig Samuelson, 24, a school teacher, whose nude and headless bodies were found in two trunks in a Los Angeles railroad station, were killed late Saturday night in their apartment at 2929 North Second st., George Brisbois, chief of police, said today.

Bloodstains found on rugs and furniture indicated the two women had been killed there and their bodies placed in trunks and taken to 1130 East Brill st., where Mrs. Ruth Judd, who formerly roomed with Miss Lerol and Miss Samuelson, resided.

H. U. Grimm, a baggageman, told Chief Brisbois he had helped a Mrs. Judd who had been a private secretary to a physician at the clinic, carry the trunks from her apartment to his automobile Sunday afternoon. They took the trunks to the railroad station.

Mrs. Judd, Grimm told officers, purchased a ticket to Los Angeles and checked the two trunks. Grimm said Mrs. Judd told him the trunks contained books.

HUSBAND DAZED BY TRAGEDY

Los Angeles, Oct. 20—"I don't see how a woman as slight and weak as Ruth could have crammed those heavy dead bodies into the trunk."

Betraying deep emotion, Dr. William C. Judd of Phoenix and Los Angeles, today apparently accepted police accusations that his missing wife, Winnie Ruth Judd, had committed the double trunk-murder of Agnes Lerol and Hedwig Samuelson in Phoenix.

Questioned at police headquarters following his arrest within a few hours after the grim contents of the two trunks were revealed at the Southern Pacific station, Dr. Judd disclaimed all knowledge of the murders.

MUST HAVE HAD AID.

"Ruth must have had an accomplice if she committed those murders," he said.

"I can't imagine how she, weighing only 100 pounds, and ill, could have crammed those bodies into the trunks.

"Agnes Lerol weighed about 150 pounds. She had been dieting and taking other measures to reduce her weight.

"When I left Phoenix, a short time ago, Ruth remained in our old apartment until recently, when, after quarrels with the other women, she moved to an apartment on Brill st.

"Ruth had a position as secretary at the Lois Grunow Memorial clinic, where Mrs. Lerol was X-ray technician. Miss Samuelson was a patient there, so, through their work and living in the same duplex house, the three women were thrown into close association constantly."

QUARREL OVER CAT

"I had several letters from my wife that indicated she was quarreling frequently with the other two women, before she finally moved away from the duplex bungalow.

"She wrote me on one occasion that Mrs. Lerol and Miss Samuelson had taken a couple of men to the place and that there had been drinking, that caused one quarrel.

"Another time they quarreled over a rat. I don't know anything about the murders and I can't understand why Ruth might have done such a thing."

3 LOSE LIVES IN AUTO PLUNGE

firemen recovered the three bodies.

Coombs was taken to St. John's Hospital, suffering from shock and immersion. It is expected he will be released later today.

Harold Johnson, 24, of 1 Coburn pl., employed in a nearby garage, was among the first at the scene and dived into the water to assist in recovering the bodies. He made four unsuccessful attempts and then was taken from the water exhausted. He recovered after treatment.

Coombs told police the party had driven to Belmont and had visited a young child of the Ballou family in a hospital. They were returning and had trouble with the car outside of Lowell, he said.

Reaching Lowell, and being unfamiliar with the streets, they drove into French st., which comes to a dead end at the canal, he said. They reached the fence before they were aware of it, and crashed through, plunging into the canal.

BUTTED TOP WITH HEAD

In the hospital, Coombs, father of six young children and a wounded veteran of the World War, told of his tragic experience.

"We had turned up a street that Ballou thought was a through street," Coombs said. "All of a sudden my wife shouted, 'Oh look,' and we went through the fence. The car was then held up at all. We dropped into the water.

"There was some air in the top of the car. My wife said, 'Open the door,' but I couldn't. The force of the water was so strong against it. I butted the top of the car with my head and tore a hole in it with my fingers.

"I shouted to Ballou in the front seat but he didn't answer.

Author Kyne Pays 13-Year Debt So Ponies Can Run

Chicago, Oct. 20 (AP)—A thirteen-year-old debt overtook the race horses of Peter B. Kyne, the author, yesterday at Hawthorne track—and the nags are not so slow, either.

They were just bounding up the runway into a railroad car to leave the track when a deputy sheriff representing R. G. Sherman sprinted up. Sherman said that Kyne, then a captain in the army, suddenly needed 5000 francs after the armistice in Bordeaux and that he advanced the sum on an I. O. U.

"Ever since then I've been trying to catch up with him," Sherman said.

Yesterday he learned the horses were here and swore out a writ of attachment. Kyne paid out $853 to release his ponies.

I squeezed through the hole to the top of the car and reached down for my wife but I didn't have the strength to pull her up.

MIGHT HAVE SAVED HER

"I was standing on the top of the car, but the water was up to my arm pits. I was shouting and somebody threw a ladder to me. If they had come right down they might have got my wife out. I didn't want to be saved if she wasn't saved.

"Now I've got to get back home to my six children, the oldest is eight years and the youngest eight months."

Coombs said the Ballou's were living in his home while Ballou sought employment. Coombs served with the 103rd Infantry, 26th Division, in France.

Local Druggists Supplied With Free Sample Packages Of Two New Vick Products

Desire of Makers That Every User of Vicks VapoRub Have a Free Trial of New Vicks Nose and Throat Drops and Vicks Medicated Cough Drops.

RESULT OF RESEARCH

New Discovery Makes Possible New Vick Plan Of Home-Control of Colds

REDUCES "COLDS-TAX"

A quarter century ago Vicks VapoRub introduced the modern and better method of treating colds—externally. Now, Vick Chemists develop a new preparation—Vicks Nose and Throat Drops—based on a new idea in preventing colds. A perfect ally to VapoRub, it makes possible the new Vick Plan for better Control of Colds in the home—and further reduction of the family "Colds-Tax." Here is the Plan:

1—Before a Cold Starts.

On exposure to colds or any of the ills that ordinarily lead to colds—crowded indoor places—stuffy, poorly ventilated rooms—sudden temperature changes—wet and cold—just slow down the normal functioning of the nose. Nature's marvelous "first line of defense against colds"—as Vicks Drops promptly. Or, if and actually threatens—when you feel that first stuffy, sneezy irritation of the nasal passages—a few drops up each nostril and many annoying colds will be avoided.

2—When a Cold Strikes.

Use the convenient Vicks Drops during the day—anytime, any place—as often as needed for comfort and relief. At bedtime, rub Vicks VapoRub well over throat and chest and cover with warm flannel. Leave bedclothing loose around the neck so the medicated vapors can be inhaled all night long. This Vick Plan gives you a full 24-hour treatment. (If there is a cough, you will like another new Vick product—Vicks Cough Drops—actually medicated with ingredients of Vicks VapoRub.)

Trial Packages, Free

In order that every user of Vicks VapoRub may try the two new Vick products now being introduced, a supply of free trial packages of each has been sent to every druggist in the United States. Go to your druggist today and ask for yours. If, by any chance, his supply is exhausted, send us the top of a Vicks VapoRub carton—or coupon from the Vicks VapoRub directions folder—and we will mail free samples direct to you, together with a folder on the new Vick Plan for Control of Colds in the home. FILENE SCORES 'PARASITES IN BUSINESS'

No man has a right to remain in business unless he can make it profitable, Edward A. Filene, prominent Boston merchant, declared at the State House today in urging enforcement of the minimum wage law.

The wage the average man earns, Mr. Filene said, is what counts, as profits come out of wages and not vice versa.

Appearing before the special commission created by the Legislature to study the workings of the minimum wage law, Mr. Filene asked that it be enforced, not only to benefit employes, but also the State and country.

TOO OLD-FASHIONED

"Industries have been failing at about the rate of 100 every day since 1929," he said. "The trouble is a great many concerns are still doing business with the antiquated methods of their grandfathers. They are charging too high prices and paying too low wages.

"Three-quarters of the producers and distributors are parasites on the rest of industry because they are paying too low a wage."

As an example of high prices, he cited the railroads which are requesting an increase in freight rates.

"If they lowered the rates, rather than raised them," Mr. Filene said, "they would do more business. If the rates are raised, many concerns will use motor trucks exclusively.

"The world is going through an industrial revolution, the first stage of which is the machine age, he said, adding:

"Formerly, business men thought profits came only from catering to the rich. Now they have to in to the masses, and the answer is mass production, the wedding of science to machinery."

FRANSE FOR RESEARCH.

He praised the scientific research methods of Ford, General Motors, General Electric and others.

"It is perfectly clear," Mr. Filene said, "that there must be increased production and also increased buying power.

"What the average man earns is what counts. The minimum wage should be strengthened and manufacturers forced to pay it. Let us get rid of the parasites who are unable to make their businesses pay, and meet the minimum wage."

Persons, Haverhill Union Manager, Out

Haverhill, Oct. 20.—Leo Hamilton, general secretary-treasurer of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, announced from his Boston office today that Charles E. Persons, Haverhill district manager of the union, had resigned.

Hamilton reported that Persons' resignation was sent to Alfred Bernheim in New York, author of the present labor agreement between the union and the Shoe Manufacturers' Association, and added that Bernheim had also withdrawn.

Action of both men follows recent unsuccessful attempts to have the union and manufacturers agree on a new shoe pact.

$50,000 WEEKLY FOR CAPONE

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Correspondent

Chicago, Oct. 20.—With Al Capone facing 17 years in prison, the Chicago underworld, of which he is the supreme dictator, is going to the front for him with tons of the realm. A "Capone Fund" aggregating $50,000 a week is being raised, it was learned today.

Every speakeasy in Chicago is contributing to the fund. The Capone syndicate has slapped an extra $2 on the price of every five-gallon can of alcohol sold in the city. Some time ago the price of these five-gallon cans was "hegged" at $20. It has now jumped to $22 a can to every saloonkeeper. The $2 goes to the fund.

Twenty-five thousand five-gallon cans of alcohol are sold weekly in the Chicago metropolitan district. This means an added revenue of $50,000 a week, which is to be used to help Capone in his fight against imprisonment or to make him as comfortable as possible in prison if he is forced to do a long stretch.

U. S. to Try to Put Capone in Jail

Chicago, Oct. 20. (INS)—The United States Government will ask that Al Capone be sent to the penitentiary immediately pending settlement of his appeal from his income tax evasion conviction, it was revealed today.

The Government's demand to send the head man of Chicago's racketeering gang to jail will be vigorously opposed by defense counsel when Capone goes before Judge James H. Wilkerson for sentence on Friday.

LEADERS FIGHT FOR NAVY YARD

plates the abandonment of this yard."

"The closing of the yard would be a most serious blow to New England and, while I am in sympathy with the President's desire to effect reasonable economies in these times of financial distress, it is my feeling that New England has every right to ask the administration for the fullest and frankest statements of the reasons which have led it to recommend to Congress the closing of the navy yard and for a statement of the economies which will be effected, and even if certain economies are shown, we have a right to ask whether the federal economies are a fair offset to the many losses which will result from closing the yard."

President Harriman said the Boston navy yard is one of the best equipped in the country, that as closing would throw 1600 civilian workers out of employment, including 600 war veterans and that an annual payroll of $2,000,000 to civilian workers would be lost to the community. He said the existence of the yard represents $10,000,000 annually to the business men of this section.

He said half the workmen at the yard, being over 50 years of age would find it difficult to get employment elsewhere.

Meanwhile, members of the Association for the Maintenance of the Boston Navy Yard are at work gathering signatures on a petition against the closing of the yard.

Already almost 50,000 names have been secured. Richard S. Teeling, Charlestown banker and president of the association, today will select a prominent business man who will leave here at midnight for Washington to present the petition to Secretary Adams.

A mounting year of protest was continued today as various patriotic and civic organizations joined the battle to save the yard. Plans were under way to deluge Washington with protesting telegrams and letters from members of the various organizations.

The American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, disabled veterans of the World War, United Spanish War Veterans and the various patriotic organizations headed a wide appeal through their ranks to support the movement to save the yard.

'EDISON LIVES ON'—BRISBANE

Newark, N. J., Oct. 21 (U.S.)—Arthur Brisbane, noted editor, paid glowing tribute to Thomas A. Edison in a radio address from Station WOR last night, as part of an Edison memorial service. Mr. Brisbane said:

"It is a great honor to be asked to speak at a memorial service for Thomas A. Edison. It is impossible to praise him. The greatness and beauty of his character cannot be estimated or described by his inferiors, and he has no equal living.

"With him gone it is as though the greatest peak had suddenly been taken from a mountain range, but his spirit, his genius, his ideas and his great inventions remain. They continue his work and will do so as long as men remain on this earth.

"Before Edison was born, an Italian had said, 'give light and the people will find their way.'

"Edison gave light, light to the cities, and light to the mind. Every student works by the light that he supplied; darkness is conquered by it; the sun sets and night falls without interrupting man's activity, thanks to Edison.

"Edison's greatest discovery was reserved for his last day. As death approached, he lay in a deep sleep. Who knows what wonders he saw in that sleep? His last words as he stirred uneasily just before death were: 'It is very beautiful over there.'

"The vision of his genius had taken him far from this earth.

"Edison is dead and still lives, an honor to his country, an example to his fellowmen, a blessing to the world."

WALKER 'AGENT' IS DEFIANT

Mexico City, Oct. 20 (INS)—Bristling with defiance, Russell T. Sherwood, so-called financial agent of Mayor James J. Walker, who is wanted for questioning by the Seabury committee, today reiterated his determination to fight any attempts to force him to accept a subpoena on Mexican soil.

"I shall certainly decline to present myself at the American embassy for the purpose of accepting service from the Seabury committee," Sherwood told International News Service.

"In accordance with Mexican law," said Sherwood, who has engaged an American attorney to protect his rights, "I cannot accept such service in Mexico anywhere but in the American embassy, and I shall not go there for such a purpose. Why should I?"

A clear blessing of civilization

Having decided that the blessings of civilization really aren't blessings after all, the Tahitians, dwellers in "the Garden of Eden" of the South Sea Islands, have issued a call to their tribe to renounce modern life and clothes, and return to the free ways of their ancestors. Since "going native" is a tempting idea even to highly civilized people, a tropical paradise might easily tempt many of us moderns—until we realized that we would be deprived forever of having our drinking water always delightfully cooled with clear, sparkling chips of Boston Ice.

CHINA BEGS FOR SPEEDY ACTION BY LEAGUE

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service Correspondent.

Geneva, Oct. 20—The Chinese delegation today addressed a desperate appeal to the League of Nations Council for immediate action in the Manchurian conflict.

The delegation informed Aristide Brian, French foreign minister who is presiding, that unless action is taken at once the Chinese Nationalist government at Nanking may be overthrown.

The council's dilatory policy, the Chinese asserted, has so weakened Nanking's position at the peace conference which opens here today in Shanghai between the warring Nanking and Cantonese factions that President Chiang Kai-Shek may be forced to give way to a successor named by the Cantonese.

This, in effect, would mean triumph for Japan, inasmuch as the Cantonese leaders, headed by Eugene Chen, who hopes to become foreign minister in a new government, are reported ready to abandon efforts for intervention by the United States and the League and accept Japan's demands for settlement of the Manchurian dispute by direct negotiations.

Washington Sees Early Settlement of Dispute

By HOBART C. MONTEE
International News Service Correspondent

Washington, Oct. 20—The "peace note" the United States Government was drafting for dispatch to the Chinese and Japanese Governments calling upon them to observe their peace obligations under the Kellogg Pact, now probably never will be sent.

In the light of developments of the last 24 hours it appeared to administration officials today that the Manchurian crisis was definitely by yielding to diplomatic pressure from this country and Geneva and that the Chinese and Japanese Governments were headed toward direct negotiations for a pacific settlement.

Jap War Minister and Chief of Staff to Quit

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service Correspondent

Tokio, Oct. 20—An upset in the Japanese cabinet, involving resignation of War Minister Jiro Minami, was forecast here today as an outgrowth of the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria.

The vernacular newspaper Jiji declared Minami and Gen. Hisao Kanaya, chief of staff would retire from the cabinet probably in December. A military combat will be appointed in their stead, the newspaper declared.

Chinese in North Threaten to Seek Haven With Reds

Mukden, Oct. 20—Sections of northern Manchuria may seek the protection of Soviet Russia rather than come under the sway of Japan, according to Chinese military leaders in control of cities northwest of Harbin.

"As a last resort, we'll turn red," was the words brought here today from Tsitsihar, one the Chinese Eastern Railway line from Harbin to Manchouli on the Manchukuo-Siberian border. Tsitsihar is jointly operated by China and Russia.

DEMOCRATS ARE NEAR SUCCESS

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—Democratic victory may have important effect on national politics will be made by the voters two weeks from today when three states elect governors and five vacancies are filled in the House of Representatives.

Although the issues are purely domestic, local and only scattered sections will vote at all, the situation has three aspects related to the national picture.

With the House standing today 214 Republicans, 214 Democrats and one Farmer-Labor, an upset in any district in favor of the Democrats might well mean a Democratic House. Three of the five districts electing are traditionally Republican and two are traditionally Democratic.

Should a Democrat be elected governor of New Jersey and should he decide to call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Morrow, it might mean a Democratic Senate. The membership stands 47 Republicans, 47 Democrats and one Farmer-Labor.

Perishes in Fire in Vermont Home

Westminster, Vt., Oct. 20 (AP)—Walter Frost, 28, perished today in a fire which destroyed the home occupied by him and his father.

Cause of the blaze was unknown and Westminster selectmen began an investigation.

The elder Frost escaped death by jumping from a window.

Farm Board's Tardy Members Raise $85 'Revolving Fund'

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—The Farm Board's "minor revolving fund" has reached $85 and is still growing.

Unlike the $500,000,000 revolving fund granted by Congress to aid American farmers, the source of the $85 is the members themselves—a penalty for being tardy at board meetings.

The fine is $1.

From the "minor revolving fund" is bought such delicacies as fruits and sweets which the members eat as they put in long hours pondering the problems of agriculture.

How One Woman Lost 47 Lbs of Fat

In 3 Months and Feels Years Younger

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at druggists the world over. Take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

Attention to diet will help—cut out pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—the Kruschen way is the safe way to lose fat. Try one bottle and if not joyfully satisfied—money back.

SHUBERT MADE CO-RECEIVER

New York, Oct. 20 (INS)—The Irving Trust Co. and Lee Shubert today were named as equity receivers for the Shubert Theater Corp. by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey on petition of Gerson, Bressley and Hampton, Inc., of Chicago.

The petition stated that the corporation, operating 30 theaters, has outstanding obligations, amounting to $10,749,859 secured by mortgages on realty, and an issue of debentures totaling $6,360,000.

The receivership is of the type known as friendly, and consented to by Shubert counsel.

The petition stated the corporation was solvent, but without funds for maturing obligations.

The net operating loss for the year ending June 30, 1931, was $1,870,000, and for the year ending June 30, 1930, was $1,220,000, according to the petition.

"AS HUSBANDS GO" IS AN ENLIVENING COMEDY

THE VOICE OF Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Down Memory Lane!

(With Con Conrad, famous song writer)

Memory Lane. A long, queer, eventful road. Dotted here and there with milestones of happiness and unhappiness. An eventful, exciting road. So very long that we'll have to travel down it in double-quick time.

Returning from boarding school, I sneak out the first night to play the piano on the amateur night program at Miner's on the Bowery. It gets me a job at William Fox's store picture house on 125th st. Mr. Fox arrives each night in his white roadster to check up the box office receipts. I finally get the stooge part of an 80-year-old butler in an obscure vaudeville act. L. Wolfe Gilbert, the song writer, is on the bill doing a double-Jew act with crepe-hair beards. I lose my job because I can't look old enough for the part. Jesse Lasky hires me as one of his "piano fiends". I get sore at a member of the audience and walk off the stage one night. Lasky fires me.

I meet Al Jolson for the first time at Hammerstein's Roof when he comes on the stage as a volunteer stooge at the behest of Houdini. He's wearing dinner clothes, so I push him into the water tank for a laugh. I meet Flo Ziegfeld in a beer joint in Philadelphia. Leon Errol introduces us. He tells me he needs a song for Rae Samuels. I hum a song I'd written a year back. He buys it then and there. "Down in New Orleans". I promise to go back to New York with him in the morning. I sleep late and miss the train. Have it flagged in West Philadelphia. "I'm Conrad of the Follies." I tell the station master. The train stops and Ziegfeld, Leon Errol, Rert Williams, Lillian Lorrain and the rest look out of the window to see a young song writer in a green suit and worn yellow shoes climb aboard.

All night eleven nights at the Vaudeville Comedy Club. A particularly long one. George M. Cohan, Willie Collier, Corse Payton, Gene Buck and myself wind up in the Astor for breakfast. The head waiter rushes over to Payton yelling: "Take those Bowery bums out of here."

I sail on the Lusitania in steerage to appear on the London vaude stage. Sir Thomas Lipton, hearing of my steerage trip, sends for me and gets me a star part in "Everybody's Doing It" at Empire Theater. I meet and play for the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Manchester. Lady Diana Manners compliments me and I stutter my thanks. Decide to become a theatrical producer and give American musical revues in London. Get Nat Wayburn to stage "The Honeymoon Express". Sign Stanley Lupino for $25 a week. Oscar Shaw for the juvenile lead. Then the war. A nervous breakdown and complete financial failure. Two tough years recuperating in the Swiss village of Davos.

Return to America in 1916 and go into vaudeville as a single piano act. I can't get enough work to keep myself fed. I wind up by playing in the hospitals for the soldiers. I write my first hit by accident. "O French"... The profit is small. I go to Germany with the Y.M.C.A. The mark crashes and my hundred a week makes me feel like a millionaire. Back to London to produce vaudeville acts. A failure again. I recall an old Roumanian folk song I had heard in a wine cellar in Berlin. Rewrite and rephrase it and present it to America as "Lena From Palestina". A hit. Watterson and Berlin hire me as a song writer to collaborate with Russ Robinson.

We write "Margie" in less than an hour on a Saturday afternoon. We knock it out to get rid of Kenny Davis, who was keeping us from a football game. We don't think it will click. That song made more than $1,000,000. Now a year of many hits. "Barney Google". "Memory Lane". "Ma, He's Kissing Me". ...etc. etc. ... My first Broadway show, The Greenwich Village Follies."

Al Jolson, Buddy De Silva and myself become inseparable friends. ... Wealth, ease, luxury. ... I see a Rolls in a window and drive it away for five grand. ... Discover the next day that it has parts from ten other cars and it falls apart. ... Form a music publishing firm with Jolson and publish "April Showers."

We break because Al won't sing the songs we're publishing. ... Off to Europe again with plenty of money in my pocket. ... Buy a yacht in Germany from an impoverished banker and sail it back across the Atlantic.

Nathan Burkan introduces me to Francine Larrimore in his Broadway office. ... She tells me she is going to Europe to appear in a London show. ... I give her a letter of introduction to a friend. ... A few weeks later I receive a message. "I have lost your letter." It reads: "I smashed." And Miss Larrimore I have lost my heart. ... She returns shortly after and our romance begins. ... She promises to marry me if I keep the marriage a secret. ... Agreed and we go to Port Chester. ... I want to tell the whole world that I am married to the loveliest actress in the world. ... But my promise! ... I produce "The Fatal Wedding". ... My ever zealous press agent, afraid he's not getting enough publicity, tips off the papers about our marriage. ... I get plenty of publicity and I lose my wife. ... She takes the first boat to Paris. ... I follow on the second. ... I knock on her door at the Hotel Crillon and she slams the door in my face. ... I am distraught but she refuses to see me. ... The accidental meeting on the returning boat. ... We patch it up and arrive as Mr. and Mrs. ... Six months pass and we split again. ... I arrive in the Hotel Poinciana in Palm Beach to find my name on the front pages as defendant in a divorce case. ... I check out.

Friends again with Jolson. He sails again for Europe, supposedly alone. I decide to go along at the last minute. Dress as a steward and book myself in the tourist cabin for 50 bucks, but it's a lot of fun. We arrive in Paris, fight, and bang goes our friendship. I remain a year in Paris carrying the torch for my lost love. Write "Lonesome and Sorry". It becomes an international hit, but that's small consolation. Return to New York. Still in love. Can't forget and can't do anything about it. Harry Rosenthal gives a party after the opening of the "Follies". I meet Beth Berl, and she catches me on the rebound. I decide to make her a great star and build a movie presentation about her for which she receives 25000 a week. She sails for Europe and marries Mark Hanna, my publicity man. I'm broke again. In more ways than one.

I meet Arnold Rothstein. Induces me to open a theatrical booking office in his building on 57th st. He brings Miller and Lyle in one. So I again become a Broadway producer and put on "Keep Shuffling". Arnold and I walk through Central Park nights discussing business, love, people and business again. The show flops and I'm more broke than ever. Bobby Crawford, of De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, sends me to Hollywood to write songs for Fox. I see my first studio shot ... Victor McLaglen and Claire Windsor on the set. Claire is wearing seashells. At my first Hollywood party I meet Charlie Farrell, Sue Carol, Edmund Lowe, Loretta Young, Lilyan Tashman. I give my first party and more than 150 uninvited guests show up. Among them high-salaried directors and stars. Everyone goes to parties in Hollywood. I tire of Hollywood and buy back my Warner Brothers' contract for $10,000 a few days before they were about to offer me a big settlement. I return to New York and write several songs. I long for the sunshine of California again and return. Fox buys a story from me for $14,000. I go into the music publishing business and am about to fold when I meet Virginia Columbia at Tashman's.

I bring George Olsen over to hear him, insisting that Russ will be a sensation in New York. Russ and George can't get together. I feel that Russ will panic them in the East. I stop all work and bundle Russ into a New York-bound special. The show flops and I'm more broke than ever. We go to Earl Carroll to place some songs. Carroll likes both the songs and Russ' singing. The three of us go down to the Pennsylvania where Rudy Vallee is singing so that Earl may get a loan of Russ over the mike. Vallee graciously consents to let Russ use his mike. Carroll is sold. But then ... Radio offers and the deal is off. Memory Lane. Now that I've travelled down it I know it's a glorious road.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

As it happened, the opening of the Theater Guild season at the Colonial last evening was an affair of the drama related to it only by generous sponsorship. It was Rachel Crothers' "As Husbands Go," a comedy of American wives abroad, which John Golden privately produced last season and which appeared to hold its own in the general Broadway scuffle for attention. The Guild had accepted it as worthy of its own vitalizing subscription list and Mr. Golden, we are told, listened to reason.

In any event the Guild, with or without its own show, slapped off blithely on its own two feet. "As Husbands Go" was good, safe and sane entertainment if not ecstatic as comedies are supposed to be. It was speculative, even ambitious. American wives in Europe have their own point of contact with the gayer things in life and Miss Crothers seized upon the idea for a smart comedy. Usually it is the erring husband that trips into Parisian pitfalls; this time it was the lady of the family. In the proceedings following, Miss Crothers held to her own familiar formula; tossed her characters about and finally brought them together at Dubonque, Iowa, of all places.

In "As Husbands Go" Miss Crothers, while following the set rules of some spun comedy, skirted fairly close to the lines which make Americans self-conscious. Wandering wives—and widows—can be hot game. But she used them to good purpose. The wife fluttered; imagines she has discovered a better man than the one who is paying her bills. Naturally, in the end, Miss Crothers turned this into plain and unvarnished nonsense. But she permitted the widow to ride along in her own delusion; even brought in a daughter to condone, even approve, of an illicit affair. It was a matter of cold, hard financial settlement. But if the mother wished to pay the price, that was her business. It was mamma's money.

If Miss Crothers, as alleged, follows a regular rule in arranging procedure and creating situation, she surely held her characters in fair field. Each of them—even all of them—might look silly, but they played to rule. No outstanding names caught your eye in the Colonial program, but good actors made the play seem plausible. Jay Fassett, for example, who should have been the outraged husband—and was—also should have been on the theater apart. But he didn't. With simple reserve, aided and abetted by drams of Scotch, he not only proved himself a good drinker but a marvelous dissembler.

Running through the list of talents John Golden is fostering on the Theater Guild, you discovered Gloria Holden, Catherine Doucet, Geoffrey Wardwell and Ronald Robnen. These were only outstanding spots in an excellent performance. An engaging, even were the small bits done by Gloria Wragge, who won his audience from the start, and Marjorie Lytell, an ingenue by the lines and compelling situations. If she had been afflicted with an impediment in speech, that also was not, her role would have stimulated an audience. The author said Marjorie were in excellent accord.

Exactly as John Golden once described it, "As Husbands Go" is sophisticated comedy—not so very bad, not so very good. But it does run up a pleasant score and there, and it does arouse new faith in American drama. Rachel Crothers, the author, promises, provides the faith; John Golden has hired the actors. And the Theater Guild has adopted the consolidated product to its own devices.

Rich Comedy at Copley

By HARRIS MORGAN

A company of players, sensitive to each gay and poignant moment in a comedy of rare value and charm, presented "Philip Goes Forth" at the Copley last night.

This play is one of George Kelly's masterpieces. The emphasis is less in drama than in character; less in trick of plot than in the genuine and ironic reality of its situation. It is admirably directed by Edward F. Goodman.

Philip, in the full flush of his dream to become a great playwright, goes forth from the security of his home and his job to seek the elusive flame which flickers before his vision, but which does not burn. And he finds himself, as he is and as he was; a sound and efficient man of business, and not the artist of his vague desire.

Raymond Hackett, as the young would-be playwright, gives a vivid and sensitive performance; he has a fine and full understanding of his role. Della Winslowright, as his sympathetic, but clear-sighted aunt, is excellent. Richard Woolf contributes a rare hit as the unbalanced gentleman of letters.

Mavis Wall as Mrs. Oliver, the friend who contributes facile encouragement, gives a performance of charm and complete naturalness. Elizabeth Dana is attractive as Cynthia, the girl who shares his dream and his love.

Amy Loomis, in the difficult role of the poet who expresses her art in impressive and appropriate words, is also excellent. And Helen Ray, in the role of the sex-less-lordly—but still effective—achieved accomplishment—gives a notable performance. All members of the cast share in the general distinction.

Exeter Theater

Ina Clair in "Rebound" and Lowell Sherman in "High Stakes" are the attractions for today and tomorrow. The last half of the week Sally O'Neil will be seen in "The Beat." Mary O'Brian in "The Runaround" will also be shown.

MADGE KENNEDY, who is starred in "Private Lives," comedy which opened at the Tremont, last night.

"Football for the Fans" at Olympia-Uptown

Following the golf shorts of Bobby Jones at the Publix Olympia and Uptown, comes another sports series, this time devoted to the seasonal game of football. This series is made interesting by Howard Jones, of Southern California and others. Each unit in the series is enacted by a college team, Yale, Harvard, Southern California and others.

Phil Cook, Radio Star at the Met, Was Neighbor of Edison for Years

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

To Phil Cook, the man of many voices, the great Edison was more than just that—more than greatness, as fame goes. For the great entertainer not only worked for the great inventor, but was his neighbor for years. He knew Edison, therefore, more intimately than the public whose opinion constitutes fame. And his estimate of Edison is not only timely, and from the heart, but worth while—among many other worth while things the radio star, now in person at the Metropolitan, let drop while we were conversing with him.

"Edison measured highest in every way as a man," said Cook. "The world knows his greatness as an inventor, and its debt to him for so many wonders which have become every day necessities to us now. But he was also the ideal neighbor and fellow citizen and family man. One could not meet a sweeter, kindlier, better man than he was. He was a patient listener, had keen judgment, was quick to grasp any problem and quick to give his decision. He improved life for the world by what he achieved; he ennobled it for all who came within reach of his own life and friendship. He was every inch a man, a great man, in every way."

The pioneer "one man show" of the air, Phil Cook, is at the peak in radioland, and going stronger as Allison ever. He is a striking fellow, big and handsome, looking like a movie hero or a politician battler, broadshouldered and tall. Knute Rockne would have been proud of him. But it so happened that Cook never got to college; he went to work instead. It wasn't long before the radio "bug" got him; that was nine years ago.

"I tried out with my 'uke" and made good," he said. "Soon I was doing nothing else but work for the radio."

We asked him how he discovered his remarkable ability to enact so many characters—young, old, age makes no difference, and he does them all perfectly.

"I had a partner in an air stunt we were doing," he explained. "An emergency put the problem up to me of doing both parts of the sketch. I did. It went on for weeks; nobody ever discovered it was a one-man show; not even those who sponsored the act. So gradually I took on more and more parts and found I could imitate anything almost, even a ventriloquist's dummy."

What was the largest number of roles he had ever enacted?

"In a six-minute sketch I did 15 characters. Even with a different voice," he replied.

The star says he suffered so keenly from "microphone fright" his first night on the air, that he could barely whisper his greeting to his initial radio audience. Cook is a hard worker, rising at 7:30 a. m. each day and spending hours writing matter for the day's broadcast. While on stage he is doing four shows a day; but he keeps in form by getting to bed soon after his last curtain at night.

"It's a grind," he says, "but I love it. My radio audiences are to me as much alive as those who sit in theaters."

Would the stage lure him away from the "mike"?

"Hardly," he answered. "Not until the radio gives me the air, and I hope that will be a long, long time off."

Monday Openings

COLONIAL—"As Husbands Go," a comedy by Rachel Crothers. First of the Theater Guild presentations for the season. Reviewed on this page.

COPLEY—"Philip Goes Forth," a comedy by George Kelly. Reviewed on this page.

Nanette Dailey Hit at Howard

At the Old Howard is a bill of exceptional worth, combining Columbus burlesque, the Sharkey-Carnera fight pictures and vaudeville. The burlesque is presented by the "Flapper Follies" company, headed by Nanette Dailey, a star of notable ability. The comedy element is well placed in the hands of Harry Leving and Jack (Tiny) Fuller. John Quigg, Gus Faig, Harry Van and other favorites are also heard. Snookie Woods, Ruth Bradley, Connie Fanslow are stars. The fight pictures are of interest, showing the much talked of fourth round where Carnera went down, remained a few seconds, got up and went down again without being hit. The Harry Van introduces Bennie Drohan and Martie Dupree in a festival of comedy.

Bill Boyd Heads Cast for Lumber Camp Picture Under Pathe Banner

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

New York, Oct. 20—One actor who simply cannot escape undesirable publicity is William (Stage) Boyd. Every time Bill gets into an argument with a friend, a cop or a stranger, it rates headlines. True, other actors are just as indiscreet but some way they manage to sidestep the watchful press.

Louella O. Parsons

William (Screen) Boyd of the same name has times without number been accused of some escapade that belongs to his namesake. Being a happily married man and in love with Dorothy Sebastian, his wife, Screen Boyd has decided to change his name to Bill, so in the future there will be no mix-ups.

Bill's next at Pathe is a lumber camp story called "Timber Beast," by Marion Jackson. Al Rogel, director who has just returned from Fresno, reports the exteriors will be made in the big trees in that part of the world. The same scene that figured in Wallace Reid's most successful pictures.

That undeniable gift to the feminine sex, Clark Gable, is to be the featured player in an exciting adventure story of the Orient. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's literary representatives, after reading "China Seas," by Crosbie Garstin, decided it was a toss up whether it was best suited to Clark Gable or Robert Montgomery, but on second thought it seems more the type for Gable, since it is the story dealing with a young English pilot who is engaged in pirate fighting in China waters. In other words, it is a tale of the last stand of sea piracy, a typical Gable screen character.

Young and Healthy

The newest novel by Donald Henderson Clarke, "Young and Healthy," is being discussed for the movies. Mr. Clarke, I hear, has had three or four offers for the screen rights to the story, but he is not selling this time without getting offers from several sources. "Millie" was sold to Charles Rogers, while Universal owns the rights to "The Impatient Virgin."

Washington was in the throes of welcoming Estelle Taylor or Mrs. Jack Dempsey on Friday. Great billboards announced her presence in the city and newspapers carried large advertisements telling of her appearance. All though she arrived in Washington on the same train that I took me there I had nary a glimpse of her. She is doing her act at the Fox Theater, and if I had had a moment's leisure time I certainly would have seen that sketch for myself. One hears such conflicting reports of her ability as a stage actress. Washington motion picture houses are reported to be doing good business after the summer lull.

Old Gem Is Found

We will have all the directors and writers in Hollywood browsing among old books and magazines. George Archinbaud, desperate for a story, found an old Harper's Bazaar of 20 years ago in which a story of Africa was published, "Diamonds Shine" by Rene Dounal, to be exact, is the tale that so captivated the fancy of the R. K. O. director. His company promptly purchased it and will produce it after he finishes "Pick Up." George's stepfather, that veteran actor, Emile Chatuard, who they tell me is extremely proud of his step-son, is playing one of the leading character roles in "Shanghai Express," Marlene Dietrich's present picture. Two other well known character men in the cast are Gustav von Seyffertitz and Lawrence Grant.

One thousand feet of the film, "Scarface," convinced Winfield Sheehan that Ann Dvorak, leading lady of that particular picture, had plenty of appeal. Ann is Howard Hughes' discovery and is said to be a modified edition of Joan Crawford. Well, to go on with the story, after Winnie saw Dvorak emote he promptly signed her for the lead in "The Devil's Lottery." Sally Eilers, you see, is very busy with "Dance Team," in which she and Jimmie Dunn do their stuff. Sally, according to a Hollywood report, has been sick in bed for several weeks.

(Collected at random by an observer)

NILS ASTHER and VIVIAN DUNCAN apparently giving a light to all rumors, dancing at the Cocoanut Grove. The two of them have shown no evidence of separating. BUDDY ROGERS and MARY BRIAN dancing together at the same place. MARY'S strong romance with RUSSELL GLEASON apparently taking a night off. MARIE DRESSLER celebrating her return home from New York by lunching at the Brown Derby Wilshire with WALLACE BEERY, DOROTHY JORDAN and DON DILLAWAY, formerly Hollywood's bill and coners, at the Cocoanut Grove. FELIX YOUNG there dancing with SYLVIA SIDNEY. DOROTHY BURGESS starting something new by lunching with four men. GLORIA SWANSON, whose romance with MICHAEL FARMER still seems hot, dancing at the Ambassador with him. That's all today, see you tomorrow.

Well Balanced Scollay Bill

This week's vaudeville bill at the Scollay is a well balanced program with seven good acts. Topping the bill is Dolores Demonde and her Canadian Knights with Billy Hughes, in "The Rookie." The skit is all the name implies, with a Northwest mounted post as a stage setting.

The trend of taste of the theater-going public for the best music was demonstrated in the fine reception given to Clara Shear, lyric soprano, for the San Carlo and the Chicago Civic Opera companies.

Boyle and Della offer a fine act that features Italian comedy and the playing of several stringed instruments. Diaz and Powers are clever in "Frolics on the Wire." The Luster Brothers are good acrobats and they offer a trick of magic with a bottle and spoon that is funny, indeed. Leary and Craven are fair with songs and comedy. The four Cirillo Brothers present "Variety."

The overlapping of the summer sports season and the fall and winter seasons provide many sporting thrills in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. Sun Beau, greatest purse winner the track has ever known, is shown winning the Hawthorne Cup and a $20,000 stake by beating out that other great horse Mate by a length-and-a-half, ending his racing career in a blaze of glory.

Mrs. Hoover, wife of the President, christens the largest living boat ever built in the United States. She gives it the name "American Clipper." The sheep army has begun its trek to the lowlands.

Boston police force holds its annual parade and it's a stirring review for Mayor Curley and other notables. The men march splendidly and end the parade with a unique exhibition by the riot squads.

RADICAL SPIRIT A GOOD THING IN THE THEATER

By GILBERT SELDES

A FEW WEEKS AGO I read an editorial which not only announced that Greenwich Village and all it stood for was dead, but that it had never been of the slightest importance when it was alive. I knew from occasional visits that fresh and tall apartment houses stood where brokendown rooming houses had welcomed genius years ago, that rents were high, that many of the great ones had departed to suburban homes, domestic happiness or the contrary, and fat salaries; and the speakeasies were not any better than those uptown. Even the jail which had been a landmark, although not a home, for roving spirits, had been rebuilt. I was a little inclined to agree with the injurious writer. After all, what had Greenwich Village, including its counterparts in other cities—accomplished?

GILBERT SELDES

Today I've been reading an account of what is probably its greatest achievement, a biography called The Provincetown, dealing with the little theater of that name which for fifteen years lived more excitingly than any other theater of our time. It is, incidentally, a good book, written so critically that its sentiment and its enthusiasm are acceptable because they are matched by frankly unfavorable comment and supported by a good-humored cynicism. Probably no large city in the United States has failed to feel its influence, if only because in every large city some plays of Eugene O'Neill's have been produced, by professionals or amateurs.

Not a Monastery

O'Neill, I am told, lives on Park Avenue now; he has a home in France; even the printed versions of his plays make money, and a vast, over-intellectualized production like Strange Interlude is hippodromed across the continent. I can't see that this is a disgrace to him or to the Provincetown; they were not dedicated to starvation and obscurity, only to producing the kind of plays they wanted to produce. They often put on bad plays, as most producers do; once in a while, in the later stages, they produced plays which they hoped would bring them money. For the most part, they deserved their financial successes as surely as the commercial producers did.

O'Neill's is not the only great name connected with the Provincetown. Although they were not beginners, Walter Huston of the movies, Kenneth Macgowan of Broadway, and Robert Edmond Jones, who creates the great scenic glories of our stage, all did significant work with the tiny downtown theater and received from it experience and encouragement which have been effective in their careers. One Pulitzer prize went to the Provincetown, the award to Paul Green for "In Abraham's Bosom"—now justified by his current play, "The House of Connelly." And there was "The Emperor," which started Gilpin and Robeson on new careers.

I have seen dreary plays, plays wilfully obscure, plays not worth a moment's thought at the Provincetown; and I also saw them do a play which simply could not be done by any other group, at any other place, and which was worth whole seasons not only of commercial productions, but of arty ones, the play called "him," by E. E. Cummings. Since I became involved in its fate this play, arriving near the end of the theater's existence, strikes me as a more important production even than the O'Neill successes. The critics of the daily papers went completely mad, called ugly names, jeered and catcalled in print. I wrote the preface to a pamphlet of these opinions (and the high praise of others) and another storm broke. I dedicated the pamphlet to John Anderson, then and now the critic of the New York Evening Journal, whom I had never seen at the time, whom I believed to be about 60, since he wrote with divine authority and who was distinguished from his fellow-critics by a single circumstance—like them he hated the play, but unlike them, he understood it.

A Timid Theater

There is no fight left in the theater and, by a coincidence, theaters are dark, sparsely attended, and rarely entertaining. It is better to have a theater which produces bad plays under the impression that they are good, than to have a theater which produces bad plays, knowing they are bad, to make money. The present theater is shot through with insincerity. It is half-hearted. If you want to accuse Greenwich Village of failure because it did not regenerate the American theater, you may. But you ought to consider the awful lump which this small group was called on to leaven.

George Derrick writes to inquire what has become of my scheme of knocking off work between the ages of 20 and 30, during which everybody will be financed by the profits made at congenial labor from the age of seven and after 30. I am happy to report that it seems on the high road to success. The only difficulty is that an Englishman has proposed a rival system which is attracting more attention.

His plans call for compulsory hibernation. He believes that science can find a way to freeze the human body just a little, so that it will vegetate for months at a time, as the bear does, on its own nourishment. He thinks that this is better than starving and has the advantage of restoring human beings to circulation whenever we want them. The worker, having no work, will repair to the nearest frigidorium, take cold, and be laid away in comfort for half a year. Later, he will be thawed out and a job will be waiting for him. (In reverse order, of course; first the job must wait, then the man will thaw.)

MAYOR SNUBS HOOVER AT ANNAPOLIS

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 20 (AP)—President Hoover received a rousing welcome from the Annapolis midshipmen today, but the city of Annapolis as such did not participate.

Presidential salutes was given as Mr. Hoover debarked from the battleship Arkansas and entered the grounds of the Naval Academy to pass between two long lines of midshipmen at the White House and mobiles. Another salute sounded as the party left the academy grounds.

More than 2000 Annapolis citizens made up their crowd assembled about the academy, but when Admiral Thomas C. Hart called on Mayor Walter Gunnerdt upon the arrival of the President he was informed the Annapolis executive was not present.

Gunnerdt wrote to President Hoover protesting the failure of the chief executive to recognize an official welcoming party from Annapolis as Mr. Hoover traveled what city to board the ship last night.

In making known that he had taken such a letter, the mayor of plans for the city's participation in ceremonies welcoming the President upon his arrival today had been abandoned.

It said he had arranged with the Dreadnaught of the navy service for Annapolis to take part in the exercises last Saturday, but that when the presidential party in his caravan on the highway, it was not recognized.

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—President Hoover returned to the White House shortly after 9 o'clock today, somewhat refreshed from his journey to Yorktown to participate in the sesquicentennial celebration.

Hoover Didn't Intend to Ignore Mayor

Washington, Oct. 20 (AP)—President Hoover's failure to greet the mayor of Annapolis last Saturday, while he was en route to Yorktown, was explained at the White House today as merely a misunderstanding.

It was said at the executive offices that neither the President nor his secretary, nor any of his immediate aides knew anything about plans to greet the Annapolis mayor as they passed through the city.

A secret service man understood the mayor would meet the presidential party at the Naval Academy dock.

EUGENIE HATS, INDEED!

These little maids who live in a fishing village on the coast of Brittainy, are from the same country as the much-discussed Empress Eugenie. And perhaps that is why they are carrying the "Empress Eugenie" hat mode several steps farther. The braided bodices and flowered over-skirts are more ancient in style, but just as attractive. (Int. Newsreel photo.)

Prince Michael Says He'll Be an Air Pilot

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 20 (AP)—Prince Michael of Rumania has decided that when he grows up he will be an airplane pilot like his Uncle Nicholas. His decision was made after his uncle took him for a ride over Bucharest. He will be 10 years old Oct. 25.

Illness Is Fatal to J. H. Sullivan

John H. Sullivan, 37, World War veteran, and brother of Henry J. Sullivan candidate for the school committee, died last night at the Chelsea Naval Hospital. He made his home at 17 Wolfe st., West Roxbury, where he was stricken Sunday.

ORDERS FLOOD BRITISH MILLS

Manchester, England, Oct. 20 (AP)—Increased activity is reported in many Lancaster and Yorkshire cotton mills as a result of an influx of orders since the gold standard was suspended.

Mills in which the spindles and looms been silent are now humming with activity executing rush orders, while the nearby Yorkshire district cotton doubling mills are working overtime.

One large mill at Rochdale has started a night shift to fill its orders, and at Haslingden another cotton mill will operate on a 55-hour week instead of the usual 48 hours.

Trade union officials have objected to the overtime work but the workers are said generally to be glad to earn the extra money.

Youthful Hunter Returns Safely

Berlin, N. H., Oct. 20. While the woods were being searched 10 miles north of here for Sherman E. Spears, 17-year-old Berlin high school boy, who had been missing since Saturday noon, the boy found his way back to camp yesterday and within half an hour went out on another deer hunt.

When he again returned to camp he found the searching party headed by his father, there, tired from their futile search.

GREATNESS OF STRATTON LITTLE KNOWN TO WORLD AT LARGE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

OCCASIONALLY THE DEATH of a really great man s overshadows the death of a lesser known figure that th public does n ... the papers so ... of the latter nor his value ... In the case of Dr S ... mer president of Technology, his ... was circumstantially linked ... with that of Edison he was ... tribute to Edison when he went to ... passibly the reader would know ... him will come to learn something of ... importance to American science. ... Edison were colleagues in the ... of applied science and it is only ... we remember the younger man as a ... tribute to the older and more ...

Sometimes this overshadowing of a distinguished figure takes place ... circumstances that make one extremely ... ashamed of our ... national ... in America but felt nauseated and disgusted, a few ... ago, when the death of Charles William Eliot, ... yard for 40 years, long called our "first citizen," was all but crowded out of the newspapers by the blatant and mercenary ballyhoo surrounding the death of an essentially unimportant screen actor who had, through clever advertising, become, in the imagination of foolish women and girls, a kind of ... the unattainable romance in life.

Product of the Rural School

But the death of Samuel Stratton is overshadowed only by that of one of America's greatest geniuses. In many respects Dr. Stratton was like Edison. His name—Samuel Wesley—shows old American Yankee Methodist stock. Like Edison he came from the Middle West, from Lincoln s Illinois. He was a farm boy, who learned a mechanic's trade and worked at it before he put himself through college by his own efforts, ... printing and mimeographing.

He was a product of the little red schoolhouse, of McGuffey's Fifth Reader, and the Friday afternoon speaking of pieces. I have often heard him describe his embarrassment, as a small boy, at having to face an audience and speak aloud. He never quite got over that embarrassment. His voice was low and not strong, his manner retiring, almost shy. Like Mr. Hoover before he was trained to face a microphone, he was not effective before an audience. This, incidentally, made him very ... as head of Technology, that a successful engineer ... man must have that ability, to speak clearly, compactly ... forcibly, in exposition or argument, to "sell" his personality to people who have to be shown.

He was too poor to come East to Technology, which he greatly admired. So he went to the University of Illinois and later taught mathematics. He organized the department of Electrical Engineering, back in the '80s, a new subject in which everything was still to be done. Then he turned to Physics and became in 1898 head of the department of Physics at Chicago.

His Big Work in Washington

He served in the navy during the Spanish War, ... lieutenant-commander in charge of a district of the Naval Militia. Later he was to be particularly interested in the close co-operation existing at Technology between the Institute and the government in the training of undergraduates a ... officers and in the higher education of naval technicians.

His great work was, of course, the creation and building up of the Bureau of Standards in Washington. We are told that it was his idea, that he interested Lyman J. Gage, McKinley's Secretary of the Treasury, in the project, and upon passage of the necessary act by Congress, he became its first head and its only head until 1923, when he came to Technology as president.

The story of the Bureau of Standards is ... of the great stories of American scientific expansion. He began with a ... building and 24 employes. When he resigned he was directing a thousand workers in more than a dozen buildings. American applied science owes enormously to Dr. Stratton's work in the bureau, particularly during the war years.

The interests that Dr. Stratton energized at the bureau he carried over into his presidency of Technology. He was not, in the strictest sense of the term, an educator, nor was he familiar with nor particularly interested in the theory of education such an institution as Technology. He was, however, always active in keeping before the undergraduates the claims of a life spent in the service of science and before the graduate students the claims of the U. S. government to the services of young scientists, as a duty they owe both to their country and to the larger world of scientific investigation.

Gave His Life to Public Good

He was active in tying up technical education to the needs of industry and industrial resources to the needs of technical education. The new departments of Aeronautical Engineering and of Building Construction are part of the record of his administration. In addition, he was constantly being called upon for service on scientific commissions all over the world. A year ago he made a survey of European flood-control projects for the service of the United States. He had just returned from England, where he represented us at an international ... of the work of Faraday, the pioneer in electricity.

He did not speak well, he wrote little, he was not a philosopher in science, like the present president, Dr. Karl Compton. He was not an inventor or a great discoverer of new hypotheses. Huxley said once that "science is organized common sense." I imagine that Dr. Stratton so regarded it. His talents lay in organization and administration, the executive work by which he brought together expert young men and supervised them and co-ordinated their work in the service of useful applications of science.

Few people knew of his work. It was not of a sort to thrill the imagination, as Edison's was. But the sum total of his achievements at the Bureau of Standards and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is very considerable. Like Edison he gave his life to making the life of the American people more efficient. To him also the United States owes a great debt.

Tragedy is easy to ignore, if it doesn't hit you, but measure it on someone else and see what happens. Here's a man, Timothy Cronin, of Russell st., Charlestown, a pipe fitter in the navy yard. For himself, it wouldn't be so hard, but there are nine ways in which tragedy can hit him. If "Hoover economy" wipes out the Boston navy yard, as is threatened Cronin will have a hard time. He is 61 and has a wife and eight children—one only three weeks old. This picture should have been part of the "Save the Navy Yard" petition that has been sent to Secretary of the Navy Adams. AIMS ATTACK AT DEMERIT BILL URGED BY ELY

SCORES COMMITTEE ACTION

"I have been informed that your committee asked His Excellency the Governor if he would object to my appearing before you at a public or executive session to discuss his so-called demerit bill.

"I am also informed that he has expressed an opinion that I should not be given an opportunity to be heard since the legislative branch of our government is separate and distinct from the executive and should function without dictation.

"I am surprised that you should ask him who or who could not appear before you. You represent the people, not the Governor.

OBJECTION A SURPRISE

"It is also extraordinary that the Governor should object to an open discussion of a bill which makes possible the taking away of the rights and property of a million car owners by compulsion and break down the protection now given to thousands of our injured citizens.

"This bill proposed by the Governor is extremely complicated, and the people who pay the bills or are otherwise vitally affected by it are entitled to know how its enactment will affect them.

"I therefore ask the privilege of being permitted to analyze the proposed bill before your committee in order to show how dangerous and impractical it is."

Colds are common because people are careless. Prompt use of aspirin will always check a cold. Or relieve your cold at any stage. And genuine aspirin can't hurt you. Take two tablets of Bayer Aspirin at the first ind cation of a cold, and that's usually the end of it. If every symptom hasn't disappeared in a few hours, repeat. Bayer Aspirin does not depress the heart. Take enough to give complete relief. And if your throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in water and gargle away all soreness. In every package of genuine Bayer Aspirin are proven directions for colds, headaches, sore throat, neuralgia, neuritis. Millions who used to suffer from these things have found winter comfort in aspirin.

Is this Shem? Few know. Shem, an unknown, won the first race at Havre De Grace recently and paid $11 for $2. Later track officials found out the horse had been backed heavily. They figure now that a ringer, under the title "Shem," won the race. And here is the catch. "Shem" has disappeared.

SHORTER HOURS LABOR'S GAIN FROM SLUMP

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

"Do you think the five-day week possible generally, and desirable?"

"As the introduction of automatic machinery becomes general, it will be compulsory to prevent over-production with all its evils."

"The five-day week has been a success in our business and it is here to stay. It will spread eventually to business generally. I am sure it will be a success everywhere. It will give the people more chance to use up what they produce. The five-day week means more time for play and pleasure and the use of mechanical products.

"It will be a boon to business by creating a demand for more products."

REARDON RETURNS

—STATE ST.—

Hears:

That the lessened pace of prices was replaced by a surprisingly broad movement at the start of today's session. A better feeling pervaded the financial district which itself accounted for some of the buying. Informed brokerage circles, however, felt the real activity came from professionals attempting to anticipate the news. As this is dangerous for the average trader brokers advised them not to reach for stocks.

There are businesses now going on in Holland, I know, and in Switzerland. I have been told in which money dealers buy gold bars to be melted down into smaller pieces so they may be handled.

The folly of it. What on earth is the use of gold except as a commercial convenience? Gold which is hoarded is useless, yet people still clamor for it.

Gold in your private safe merely takes up room; but if it were in a bank, ever ready to have its value could be loaned. The more currency the more prosperity and the less want, unemployment and starvation.

Says:

Maintaining itself, right side up, the market has moved ahead for the fourth consecutive session, a record which has not been duplicated for quite a time. The total advance in itself has not been such as to throw speculators into a buying frenzy, but the fact that stocks have been able to wade through disappointing earnings reports of late is clear-cut evidence that the market is in strong hands.

STOCKS STAGE GOOD UPTURN IN WALL ST.

New York, Oct. 20—Prominent shares in Wall St. staged another good upturn today. The bond market also moved forward confidently. Carrier shares led the initial advance.

Subsiding of liquidation during the recent period of hesitancy and signs of renewed confidence in this market abroad, were generally regarded in brokerage and banking quarters as the basis of the new upturn.

OTHERS JOIN RAILS

While rails led the advance in shares in the early trading, they were soon joined by other groups. There was an average rise of about 2 points in leading issues by early afternoon.

Issues soon up 4 to more than 6 included American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Atchison, J. I. Case, Eastman Kodak, New York Central and Union Pacific.

A wide assortment of shares quickly gained 2 or more points, including U. S. Steel, American Can, Sears Roebuck, National Biscuit, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, North American, Westinghouse, Electric Power & Light, Stone & Webster, Union Carbide and Du Pont.

Trading was fairly lively in the morning, but quieted down after midday.

FRENCH ACTION CHEERS

Renewed purchases of bankers acceptances in this market by the Bank of France were interpreted as indicating that the recent flurry of irresponsible rumors abroad, together with bear attacks on the dollar, had subsided.

International bankers expressed unconcern over the Bank of France's request for higher interest on deposits here, saying that French funds were not needed in this market, and drawing down on the large French balances would improve underlying stability of the money market.

Call money held at 2½ per cent, but was available in the outside market at 2. There was scarcely any business in time money against stock exchange collateral, but the rate was pushed up 1 point to 4 per cent for all maturities.

Federal funds—excess balances of member banks at the reserve—were at easier rate, ruling at ¼ to ⅛ of one per cent, against ½ to ¾.

WALL ST. SURPRISED

In connection with the recent strength in wheat, Wall Street heard rumors of prospective agreements to sell grain to France and Germany.

There were also unconfirmable rumors of financial district of schemes in Washington looking to a better understanding over tariffe between the United States and principal foreign consumers of American goods.

Foreign copper producers arriving in New York today for the international copper conference scheduled for later in the week expressed themselves as sympathetic toward plans to curtail output.

Upturn in the securities markets took Wall Street somewhat by surprise, since brokers have been inclined to look for a period of quiet and stable fluctuations. While observers were inclined to think that there was some professional bidding up of stocks at the start, brokers said that the advance attracted a good following.

Loading of "Katy" Display Betterment

Although September showed an improvement in loadings on the Missouri-Kansas-Texas, estimated gross income is down about $70,000 when compared with August, according to M. H. Cahill, President. In a statement issued yesterday, Mr. Cahill explained that net earnings for the month, however, would probably be $100,000 greater than in August as a result of "stringent economies" put into effect the latter part of August and September.

C. & O. Profit Set at $2.76 a Share

Cleveland, Oct. 20—Chesapeake & Ohio net for nine months ended Sept. 30 of $21,122,043 after taxes, charges and sinking fund appropriations is equivalent after allowing for nine months' dividend requirements on 6% per cent preferred to $2.76 a share on 7,651,281 shares of common, against $28,074,180 or $3.27 a share on 7,554,600 common shares in nine months of 1930.

Peerless Plans to Reduce Par Value

Cleveland, Oct. 20—A special meeting of stockholders of Peerless Motor Car Corp. will be held at Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 to authorize reduction of par of the stock to $3 from $10. This will enable a substantial savings in franchise and other taxes.

Uruguayan Bonds' Interest Received

New York, Oct. 20 (AP)—Hallgarten & Co and Halsey, Stuart & Co., fiscal agents, announced the receipt of funds to meet the payment of the December 1, 1931, interest on both the Republic of Uruguay 6s of 1960 and 1964.

City of Cambridge Cuts Bond Interest

City of Cambridge has changed 3½ per cent to 4½ per cent the interest rate on its $100,000 bonds dated October 1 and maturing serially through 1941, bids on which will be received until noon, October 27.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

MAKE THE HIGHWAYS SAFE AND PLEASANT!

Every motorist in the United States should have at least one little Darling Safety Device (see cut) in his automobile to keep the highways free of menace. This marvelous gadget is made from French flannel and cannot be detected from the arm of a beautiful woman. When installed in a car it can be used for giving traffic signals, but its most important use is in case of a breakdown. Place the Little Darling in the driver's hand, pull a concealed lever and the hand contracts, giving him a loving squeeze. The officer then tears up the ticket, thus saving you hundreds of dollars at the end of a year.

EUROPE TIRES OF TAPPING U. S. GOLD

London, Oct. 20 (US) — The "whispering campaign" against the American dollar which developed to gossipmonger magnitude last week as the result of gold shipments by the United States is now fading to a faint echo.

Rumors and other gloomy forebodings have been dispelled by the poker faces and perfect "sang froid" of certain representatives of American finance, who are now conveniently sojourning in Europe and who recently attended several important meetings in Paris.

Last week's rapid closing of dollar accounts by continental banks hailed Saturday, and the 150 weeks completely turned yesterday when it was estimated that 40 per cent of the withdrawals, amounting to millions of dollars, has been redeposited.

The reasons for the cessation of the withdrawals are two:

First, the American representatives expressed satisfaction that the United States is in possession of twice the gold necessary, and is able to supply all outside demands.

The second reason for the stoppage of withdrawals is the discovery that the price of turning the Atlantic Ocean into a golden flood is entirely too high; that insurance, freight, packing and protection makes transportation of this weighty, precious metal more costly than possible loss in bank rate exchange.

Memorial Complaint Will Be Considered

The Massachusetts War Memorial Commission will meet next Thursday at 2:30 to consider the suggestion of Woodbury & Stuart, Boston architects, that a new competition be conducted to select a design for the state war memorial to be erected in this city.

The Boston firm has complained in a letter to the commission that the three Worcester architects whose designs for the memorial were selected as among the five most meritorious may have received assistance from architects outside the state.

Railroad Employes Ask for Conference

The Boston & Albany officials yesterday received from the general committee of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, representing the lodges of that road, known as the system committee, a request for a conference.

The conference is asked for the purpose of placing into operation the mileage limitation system which will cut down the amount of work being done by one man at the present time, and thus will afford employment for more members of the organization.

PORT OF BOSTON

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Non-union strikebreakers unloaded the quantity of general cargo which was brought in here on the Furness Line steamer Nova Scotia from Liverpool, England, by way of Halifax, N. S., and St. Johns, Nfld.

She brought 76 Boston passengers, included among which were a small who came here on a temporary visit from Halifax, N. S., but were held up by United States immigration inspectors until their right to land has been passed on by a board of special quiry.

WIRELESS REPORTS

Wireless reports received in Boston today indicate that the steamer Cold Harbor, coming from Manchester and Liverpool for England and Cork, Ireland, will dock at the Army Base Friday. The steamer Collingsworth, from Buenos Aires, will be in tomorrow, docking at the Army Base. The Cubano from Leloo, by way of Stavanger, will arrive tomorrow evening, the steamer East Indian, from Soderham and Sweden, for Portland and Boston, will arrive Thursday; the steamer Hartwelton, from Newfredford, for Newport News, is load for Boston, was 52 miles off Five Fathom Bank Lightship at noon Sunday; and the steamer Wellhart, for Newport News, was to load for Providence, was off Barnegat at noon Sunday.

BOSTON COLLEGE

With her crank shaft out of commission, the steam trawler Boston College, owned by the F. J. O'Hara Trawling Company of Boston, arrived at Fish Pier last night. She broke her shaft while she was 145 miles east of Cape Cod. The United States Coast Guard cutter Ossipee picked up the crippled craft and towed her to Finn's Ledge, where she was turned over to the tug Powow on the entrance of Broad Sound.

Six-Hour Day Eventually, Why Not Now?

The time has come for American employers and labor leaders to come to grips with the fundamental facts concerning employment.

Leaders must be reminded that business exists for the SERVICE OF MEN. The ironic maladjustment in industry, with GLUTTED MARKETS on the one hand and UNDERNOURISHED PEOPLE on the other, constitutes a serious indictment of management in the large.

Business has been depressed because executives were slow to discard outmoded ideas.

In order to sustain prosperity through maintaining an adequate home consuming market, business must share with workingmen more liberally the fruits of the improved industrial efficiency, resulting from greater use of labor-saving machinery and from improved technique of operations. Failure to do so precipitated the present crisis.

In emphasizing that the time was at hand for another reduction in the hours of labor, William Randolph Hearst pointed out:

"Labor-saving machinery makes a reduction of hours possible, and, in fact, necessary. Otherwise vast numbers of working people will be thrown out of employment.

"It has been the habit of the employing classes to take the full benefit of labor-saving machinery and capitalize it, depriving the working people of their due share of the benefit.

"The advantage of labor-saving machinery should be distributed to the employers in greater profits, to be sure, and to the consumer in cheaper prices; but, above all, to the working people in shorter hours, better wages and better living conditions."

With the demand and supply of man-power out of balance, American industry should immediately consider ways and means of adjusting itself to the six-hour day.

Routine minds will find many reasons why the proposal will not work. The same negative reaction followed the campaign for an eight-hour day instead of a ten or twelve-hour day.

But, in spite of reactionary rhetoric, the inexorable force of economic pressure is already compelling large scale industrial experiments in spreading jobs among wider groups of men.

A leading industrial statistician estimates that general adoption of the six-hour day would increase the present number of wage-earners in industry alone by at least two million persons.

Under the aegis of the Manufacturing Chemists' Association, leading corporations in the chemical industry have recently inaugurated the six-hour day in order to spread available work among the greatest number of workers.

The president of one of the leading corporations in that industry, in a statement to the Hearst newspapers, declared:

"While the immediate cause of our adopting the plan was emergency relief, it may well be that it will become a permanent policy."

Thus, creative leaders use an acute crisis as an opportunity for building sounder and more humane economic policies.

A leading American cereal manufacturer, who pioneered with the six-hour day, has reported that the productivity per worker has increased 3 per cent to 4 per cent.

The Hearst newspapers accordingly urge enlightened employers and representatives of trade unions to confer immediately to discuss conditions under which the six-hour day in industry may be promptly ushered in.

The proposal is especially timely for public utilities, railroads, foodstuff trades, and other relatively stable industries which are still operating on reasonably full schedules, despite the depression.

Under conditions of prosperity, a six-hour day will enable the worker to enjoy longer leisure, and to develop along cultural lines.

Preaching—Practicing

Hoover Pleads for Jobless; Would Discharge 7000 More Employed

President Hoover broadcasts a nation-wide plea for his jobless fellow citizens while he perfects plans to ADD to their number by the discharge of more than seven thousand from the enlisted force and civilian employes of the Navy.

Mrs. Hoover asks the people of the nation to spend as usual, while the President is preparing to CUT sixty millions of dollars off of urgently needed expenditures for our already inadequate Navy.

If the President is discharging men by the thousand and cutting down expenditures by the million, how can he and his good lady consistently urge the plain public to combat unemployment and to spend as usual?

The President's mentor, Mr. Morgan, who has recently cut wages and salaries throughout the great Steel Trust, might just as well rise and advise employers generally to increase the compensation of the workers.

The sweeping reduction in the naval establishment which the President has ordered the Navy Department to "recommend" is going to have a far more crippling effect upon the effectiveness of the Navy and add a far heavier burden to relief committees the country over than the American people yet realize.

For the proposed reductions in naval personnel are in addition to reductions that have been going on for many months as a result of a Presidential order against re-enlistments.

And the reduction in naval expenditures will be a body blow to American labor the country over, because eighty per cent of the money spent on naval building goes to labor directly and to labor producing materials and supplies from every State in the Union.

If President Hoover would practice what he preaches, he would build up the Navy NOW while construction costs are low and provide useful work for thousands NOW, when the need for employment is urgent and nation-wide.

If President Hoover would only take his eyes off Europe and concentrate his attention on America, he might be able to devise ways and means for improving conditions here at home, which would not be as ridiculously and injuriously inconsistent as are his actual actions compared with his high-sounding, but meaningless, advice.

Mr. Hoover was elected President of the United States of America. His chief concern should be the welfare of the United States and its people, and not the woes of foreign nations.

Now It Is Fall

Elsie Robinson

NOW IT is fall.
Last week the colors were still oily bright—
Bright emerald leaves against bright cobalt sky,
Bright jade and orange in the garden patch,
Bright purple shadows on the yellow fields,
And, over all, a brassy glare of light
That seemed to clang against the hot, red soil.

Then, suddenly, the brilliant summer broke—
And now the long, low light streams silver cool,
The softened earth is pale as coral ash;
At dawn the cobwebs spread their frail, wet lace
Across the fence rails, and the kitchen smoke
Goes slowly upward in a straight blue wand;
The sparkling air is sharp as mustcat wine;
Against the lilac shadows of the woods
The poplars burn like steady candle flame.

The resting fields are russet, rose and fawn,
Gleaming with light that clinks like thistle-down;
The wheat and oats were long since gathered in,
But now there's harvest of wild-flower seeds,
Acorns and berries, and fat roots of weeds,
Soft strips of bark and woolly floss to line
Snug burrows and warm nests in hollow trees.

All day the ground-squirrels scamper on their trails
That run like tunnels through the tangled grass,
Their fat cheeks bulging with their winter stores;
And busy wood-mice leave a dotted track
That circles zig-zag through the pinkish dust;
The quail run calling through the chapparal,
Or rise, with sudden roar of speckled wings;
The Oaks are filled with crested raiders—
Woodpeckers war with jays for acorn crops—
The air is noisy with their squalling flight;
On mossy boulders striped chipmunks squat
And shred rose-apples with their tiny hands;
A while, at noon, the light lies warm and still
Upon the fields, in a deep amber pool,
Then, from the higher ranges comes the chill
Of lonely miles of newly fallen snow;
A film sweeps like a wing across the sky—
A silence spreads its hush through wood and field—
The shadows flow like water, coldly blue,
Until the earth and sky dissolve in one—
Far off, along the ridge, coyotes howl;
The kitchen light glows warmly down the trail;
The brook's faint lisping wanders like a ghost
Throughout the darkness — and, above the pines,
There floats the watery bubble of the moon.

Just Folks

Evening Smoke

I saw the blue smoke rising from a little chimney stack,
And I knew somewhere across the fields a man was coming back.
The train that bore me westward went rushing on its way,
But I fancied I could see him as he closed another day.
Fresh smoke it was, I'm certain, for when a fire is old
The wisps that leave the chimney seem thin and worn and cold.
But blue smoke, hale and hearty, informs the weary man
That mother's in the kitchen and supper's in the pan.
Somewhere beyond the woodland I know he trudged along.
A scythe upon his shoulder and on his lips a song;
His day of labor ended, and like as not, thought I,
He's thinking now of steaming stew, topped off with apple pie.
What curious thoughts and fancies beset the homesick man
Who through a Pullman window the landscape turns to scan.
The smoke at evening tells him a husband's coming home
And supper's waiting for him—but he must westward roam.

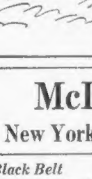
New York Day by Day

The Black Belt

NEW YORK, Oct. 20—The overpeopled strip of Harlem known as the Black Belt accepts its economic sadnesses with commendatory calm. One cannot walk through Lenox ave. without a prickling qualm that the army of colored jobless are doing less whining than most of us.



While Sunday afternoon is the gala period, when everybody struts, there seems no time when the street is without a characteristic grin. From upstairs flats float the plunk of the banjo and harmonizing of quartettes. Always music and song.

Lenox ave. offers a variety of street salvationists who are apostles of cheer. One gray haired patriarch from his curb perch cried: "Us cullud folks ain't livin' on chitlins these days. And we ain't grumblin'. We is just poah ole blacks and pow'ful glad we ain't Reds."

All of which emphasizes the diffidence of the American Negro to proselytizing by radicals. In many ways he has been hardest hit by the vast pandemonium that has swept the world. Hundreds in Harlem have not had a day's work in two years.

Aristocrats of the section are naturally theatrical folks whose vogue until recently has been pronounced. Yet the lull on the Rialto coupled with the decline of interest in the sepia revue left many entertainers without work and standing under "The Wishing Tree."

Several extraordinarily fine residences on Striver's Row and Sugar Hill are shuttered and displaying "For Rent" signs. The slump among the railroads has affected another prosperous Harlem set—pullman porters and manicure maids of de luxe trains.

In times of financial stress the colored citizen turns to religion more devoutly than ever. Churches above 125th st. are crowded and several revivals are on. The "numbers" gambling game, which is Harlem's betsetting sin, has had a big drop in suckers.

Devotion of the late Eddie Dunn to his employer George M. Cohan was symbolized by his will. He left his estate of $5000 entirely to Cohan's beautiful daughter. Helen Dunn had been Cohan's manager and personal representative since the actor's flag waving vaudeville days. His devotion to Cohan took on something of idolatry.

* * *

Dunn was for years featured in Rennold Wolf's sparkling Morning Telegraph column as the parenthesized Eddie (Waistcoat) Dunn, a tribute to his extraordinary, dazzling collection of fancy vests. No weskit was too flamboyant. He had them in zebra stripes, polka dot, blood red and apple green. It may have been an exaggeration but the Rialto reported more than 300 in the mighty array.

* * *

Cohan is not only loyal to old associations but to old scenes. In the summer he still tilts in an old chair in rear of his Broadway theater. He had a gaudy office but it was only a pretense. His real office was in this areaway. In a like manner Cohan has retained an apartment at a midtown hotel by the year. When he is rehearsing or directing a play he lives there.

Most of us think of Cohan as the jumping jack comedian—a miracle of sprightliness with a nasal twang. And even today it is rather shocking to see instead a sedate gentleman with graying hair—as white almost as that of his beloved father, Jerry.

Incidentally, a serial writer showed a letter the other day just received from an enthusiastic magazine editor. It read: "I have scanned but thirty-four pages of your latest and already have a racing pulse and febrile tongue. It sings bells and in two places fires off cannon."

* * *

My only fiction effort was a mystery yarn about twenty years ago. It came back with a printed rejection slip but inadvertently an interoffice critique was also returned, reading: "The mystery in this is how it came to be written."

As Noble Lenders

By Garet Garrett

(Reprinted from the Saturday Evening Post of October 17, 1931, by Permission of the Editor)

Take a text from the news as it was printed in the New York Times on Tuesday, June 23, 1931:

"Led by New York, tremendous buying enthusiasm swept over the security and commodity markets of the world yesterday in response to week-end developments reflecting the favorable reception of President Hoover's proposal for a one-year moratorium on war debts and reparations. The world-wide advance in prices added billions of dollars to open-market values, with stocks, bonds, grain, cotton, sugar, silver and lead in heavy demand. Pronounced strength developed in the German bond list, the gains ranging from 2 to 13½ points. . . . United States Government bonds failed to participate in the move, all of them closing behind minus signs."

Everything in the world went up with the single exception of United States Government bonds. And why was that? United States Government bonds were telling why, and telling it loudly to such as would listen. They were telling it in the language of quotations, and this is what they were saying:

"Again this business of saving Europe with American credit! Do you ever count up what it has cost you already? It is becoming more and more costly; and, besides, you may not be saving Europe at all. You may be only inflating her. Better may turn out to be worse."

As it did. The world-wide rise in everything but United States Government bonds was fictitious, a momentary delusion. Worse was to come.

Specifically, the debt-holiday plan was to save Germany from financial collapse and so avert a disaster that had been bound to react in a ghastly manner upon the whole structure of international finance. The first cost to us was reckoned at $250,000,000. That was the sum we should have to forego on account of war debts owing by Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy and others to the American Treasury.

We could not propose simply that Germany should stop paying reparations for a year to her European creditors. That would have cost Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy and others too much. They could not afford it. If they had to forego reparations from Germany and still pay interest to the United States Treasury on their American war debts, they would be hurt in their pockets.

So what we proposed was that if Germany's European creditors would give her one year of grace on reparations, the United States would give them one year of grace on their war debt payments to the American Treasury.

The situation was that France, Great Britain, Belgium and others had been collecting as reparations from Germany somewhat more than $400,000,000 a year and paying the United States on account of their war debts to the American Treasury a little less than $250,000,000 a year.

Thus a general international war-debt holiday to save Germany would cost them the difference, or more than $150,000,000. Great Britain had been collecting from her war debtors only $50,000,000 more than she has been paying to the United States on account of her own American war debt; and she was willing.

But France had been collecting from Germany $100,000,000 more than she had been paying out on account of her war debt, and she was unwilling. After long and painful negotiations it was agreed, for the sake of the debt-holiday plan and to save Germany, that France should receive special treatment.

An irreducible portion of her reparations money would be paid by Germany to the International Bank at Basle and then reloaned by France to Germany under a new arrangement. Everybody else took German's word for it.

Thus the plan took effect. It cost us $250,000,000. Well, a little more. While Germany's European creditors were debating the plan and higgling over what it was going to cost them, the Federal Reserve Bank in New York made a direct loan to the German Reichsbank to keep it open.

How much that loan was is not precisely known, because the Bank of England and the Bank of France participated in it. Say it was $50,000,000. Then it had cost us altogether $300,000,000 to save Germany. Was it not cheap enough? More than Germany, we supposed we had averted a financial crash in the whole of Europe.

We really thought we had done a grand thing; we read every morning in the newspapers that it was a grand thing. The diplomats and chancelleries of Europe were saying so in typewritten slips or in interviews, and the American correspondents were quoting them to us by cable.

But the typewritten words of diplomats and chancelleries are purposefully suave. What people, even the diplomats, were really thinking and saying was different. The least unpleasant of what the once allied nations were saying was:

"This is the beginning of the end of our hateful war debts to the United States Treasury. Uncle Shylock has been insisting that German reparations have nothing whatever to do with our war debts to America. But now he admits that if we cannot collect reparations from Germany, neither can we pay our war debts to the United States. That principle is implicit in the debt-holiday plan, since it includes both German reparations and our war debts to the American Treasury in one scheme of relief.

"Moreover, it is admitted that Germany cannot pay reparations unless she can continue to borrow American money to pay them with. So either America must go on lending Germany the money to pay us reparations or cancel our debts to the American Treasury."

Here note that the one fixed point in German foreign policy is to get rid of reparations and that the one unalterable idea in the foreign policy of the former allies—our associates in the war—is to get rid of their debts to the American Treasury.
